

CHRISTIAN RESPONSIBILITY: "LOVE THE JEW"

LOUISVILLE, KY. (WNS)- A historic conclave of Jewish and Baptist theologians and scholars has frankly discussed a number of difficult points in interfaith dialogues including Christian responsibility for anti-Semitism and conversion. Dr. A. Jase Jones, of the Southern Baptist Home Mission Board declared at the interfaith dialogue at the Southern Baptist Theological Seminary jointly sponsored by the Southern Baptist Convention and the American Jewish Committee, that "the Christians' primary responsibility is to love the Jew."

Dr. Lionel Rubinf, professor of social science and philosophy at York University, Toronto, declared "I find myself, a committed Jew, committed to a covenant which excludes the possibility of my being converted. But when I confront you, I confront someone who has a commitment to my conversion." He said that although missionary endeavor to convert would necessarily end in failure in his case, they were bound to create frustration for those who wished to convert him. "I think that in my effort to resist your invitation to conversion and in the anguish I feel when you open your arms in love and friendship and I must refuse, we both learn something about our identities and we leave each other better off than when we first came together."

Rabbi Arthur Gilbert, assistant to the president of the Jewish Reconstructionist Foundation, said to Dr. Copeland, "What you really mean to do is not conversion work but witnessing. You don't do this by ringing doorbells and handing out leaflets. You do it by letting God into your own life, by creating a community of such selfhood, such humanity, that it is a profound witness in its own right." He added, "I would like to compete with you for such witness."

In another talk at the conference, Rabbi Marc H. Tanenbaum, director of the AJCommittee's interreligious affairs department, said that the Nazi Holocaust and the meaning of the State of Israel to the Jewish people and to Judaism were the "two decisive events of contemporary Jewish experience" that "must be taken into account in any effort to understand the interior life of the Jew today."
