NY its $3 million! You've got to be as rich as Rockefeller to run for office!

Artists and sculptors should call famous artist's agent "Ricki", a new Vegan, at 382-1478 (after 5 pm) to exhibit their works at the Convention Center. She'd also like to contact scholars of the old and new testament. A protege of Fanny Brice, she's also an interior decorator. Welcome to our town.

We hope there's no truth to the rumor that Jack En-tratter, Sands VP, former Temple Prexy (5 terms), and Israelite columnist, is leaving LV for H'wd.

SAYITISNTSO!
We often wonder where dean of the columnists Walter Winchell is, and what he's doing. Poppa Tell used to cruise NYC in a radio car with the old master. The morning paper just isn't the same since WW retired.

The stock market is ready, in our humble opinion, for a new plunge of at least 100 points. As a former New York Commodity Exchange seatholder, our pick to ride out the coming recession is SILVER FUTURES, your best hedge. At today's $1.75 per ounce level the downside risk seems like a dime, while upside potential could be 50¢ to a dollar. If you're a heavy loser in stocks, just think that every cloud has a silver lining.

A tourist asked a Vegan at the Landmark to recommend a good eatin' place away from the Strip. Naturally Bombara's was suggested, where 80-year-young Carlo chants opera while you enjoy Italian gourmet delights. And homemade wine! But you'll go hungry -- he shows no mercy -- if you forget to call ahead for reservations.

Wire story: "There are 700,000 drunks in Poland every day, so the gov't is raising prices for vodka and beer."

That's not a pint-sized problem for the pickled Polish, pal.

Two fine paint stores serve different areas in LV. Vegas Paint on Main Street and Paintin' Place on Decateur. Tell 'em both the Israelite sent you, then paint the town red!

Green Leaf Nursery is the Israelite's favorite. They cut the grass AND the price, but not the courtesy or quality. Tell 'em Jay sent you, and you'll be glad to get clipped.

The New York Times isn't risking much when it requires health warnings in cigarette ads -- thus losing nearly every tobacco advertiser. Just one-eighth of one percent of Times' ad revenue came from that source.

Our worn-out response always gets the camera girls at Strip shows: "No thanks, I'm with my wife tonight." Miss Inez Schwartz, photog at the Frontier, quipped back: "That restores my faith in men!" Next time say hi to waiter Jack Ballou, waitress Icy Carson and Mat'r'd Jerry Sheutz.

Didja know Frontier's Ab-

be Lane wears a different gown at each twice-nightly performance?

We've been in love with Sun columnist Ruthe Deskin for a decade -- but we disagree with her criticism of LV's aid to Camile's hurricane victims in Mississippi. Ruthe'd keep the clothes for welfare cases here. We're proud of LV, "city of sin", for it's big-hearted residents who quickly responded in an out-of-state emergency.

Time magazine has done it again. In a slanted, distorted and misleading cover story on Israel's leader September 19th, one excerpt says, "Throughout (the commando raid on Egypt), the telephone wires hummed between Israel's general staff and a grandmotherly-looking woman who is the country's Premier, Golda Meir, 71, listened to the reports with obvious relish...."

Now, we ask WHAT GRANDMOTHERLY-LOOKING JEWISH WOMAN WOULD "RELISH" MEN BEING KILLED?

It was 78 breezy, balmy degrees at Cashman Field on Tuesday. Six Thousand cheering fans watched lightning in the mountains and on the field, as passing quarterback Dewey Warren bolted the LV Cowboys to their third football victory with one loss. Coach Paul Massey's squad romped the league-leading Sacramento Capitals 24-7. Mike Vogel's 56-yard run and Bob Humphreys' 44-yard field goal highlighted LV's dominance of the exciting game. The Israelite is proud of Nevada's first pro grid team (Continental League).

That was George Chakiris' birthday celebrating at Tower Suites Revue atop the Landmark the other night. After closing at the Riviera, George'll wing to Miami for a spot on Jackie Gleason's TV show. Next he cross-country's again, to H'wd, for a movie on LSD, which should be a profitable "trip".

That was champ marathoner Nick Kitt's fourth day out when he won easily in last week's five mile race in LV. Neal Chappell and Sahara exec. John Romero finished close behind. See, not all Strip bigwigs get flabby!

That's TELLin' 'em!

lions of words commenting on the Beirut retaliation raid.... What interests us particularly is the relationship between Israel and Diaspora Jewry.....The State of Israel instead of making life easier for the Jews of the Diaspora has made their existence more complicated....This can not be disputed....This realization does not, however, detract from our love and commitment to our brethren in Israel.. What is wrong with the picture is the role which Israel leadership has assignel to world Jewry.....This role is to provide money and if possible manpower to the State of Israel.....Israelis consider themselves a nation apart from the rest of Jewry.....And herein lies the crux of the problem, which is so intricate that it deserves serious studies which surpass the framework of a newspaper column.

When studying the matter, it would seem at first, that World Jewish leadership should share in the decisions which affect the two and a half million Jews in Israel.... The destiny of Israeli Jewry is inextricably tied to the destiny of world Jewry.....This we believe to be beyond argument....Yet, world Jewish leadership is rarely if ever consulted by Israel's policy makers except on how to increase economic help to Israel....Whenever Israel is in hot water politically, world Jewry is expected to accept, Israel's foreign policy even if it conflicts with the foreign policy of the country in which it lives....This brings us to the paramount question: Should world Jewish leadership participate in the political decisions of Israel's Government? And the answer to this is far from easy.

Let us take American Jews as an example....They are not citizens of Israel and have no legal say in Israeli matters.....Diaspora Jews feel much closer to Israeli Jewry than vice versa...

World Jewry has a great deal to contribute to Israel and we mean much more than money....Jewish statesmanship which played a substantial role in the political recognition of the State of Israel can be of tremendous help to Israel in her political isolation....If this is to be then world Jewish leadership must be consulted by Israel's leaders BEFORE they implement a major political or military policy....This is, of course, a delicate matter but since the State of Israel is unique in many ways, a World Jewish Advisory Board or something of the kind would be in order....If Israel is to give strength to world Jewry and vice versa, then Israel will have to learn that she is a part of world Jewry....World Jewish statesmen and Israeli leadership must get together....How long can Israel sit on bayonets?

How do you like that?

It is apparent that Mr. Biron does not have confidence in the Israeli leaders who have brought us so far at the risk of their very lives. We agree with many of Biron's premises like, "The destiny of Israeli Jewry is inextricably tied to the destiny of world Jewry," but his conclusion makes us sick.

World Jewry has played a tremendous part in starting, keeping and building Israel. Of this there is no doubt. Although not wholly in tune, there may be some similarity with a parent who rears a child into maturity. Then the child takes over, calling on the parent for advice and or financial assistance, but meeting the problems head-on by himself. Or possibly, consider the mish-mash of individual stockholders in a corporation, dictating terms to the board of directors.

If world Jewry has any authorization to direct the policy of Israel, then it becomes a delegation of authority, without which no country or business can exist. A case in point is the Rockefeller financial empire. Each of the five Rockefeller sons, handling different facets, is empowered to contract away the entire family fortune. That's called confidence in the breeding and devotion of men placed in high power. It works for nations as well as families.

Sure, the leaders of Israel will make mistakes, little ones, quickly rectified -- otherwise the 6-Day War might have taken five, or four, or less days. Sure, Israel will be caught in circumstances twisted far out of proportion -- like the unfortunate burning of the Arab shrine. Sure, there will be inter-party squabbles, like there are in any country, state, city, community, or family.

But first and foremost Israel will carry on, hold her own, move forward, become a leader among nations, and always be homeland for the Jew.

That is why ISRAEL MUST SURVIVE.
