MISS RODEO AMERICA AT FRONTIER DEC. 6

by HANK KOVELL
The loveliest assemblage of true western pulchritude will once again congregate in Las Vegas when the competition for the title of "Miss Rodeo America" takes place at the Frontier Hotel beginning Saturday, December 6. Then, for the next five days 50 girls, one representing each state, will compete for personality, saddling and mounting horses, figures in corral, unsaddling and grooming, obstacle courses on horseback, and other horsey activities.

Contestants compete for three days in appearance, horsemanship and personality with nine carefully-selected judges scrutinizing their actions. The judges are seeking a queen who best typifies the enthusiasm, excitement and skill of the sport of rodeo and who can be equally poised in a packed rodeo arena, before television cameras or while addressing large groups.

As a representative of rodeo, Miss Rodeo America's travels will carry her to more than 30 major events across the nation each year. She will ride in countless parades, appear frequently on radio and television, be interviewed by newspapers
