

Barney Glazer's "HOLLYWOOD HOTLINE"

Shelley Greene in the Starlite Theatre of the Las Vegas Riviera Hotel, "I fell in love with Diahann Carroll. I brought her home to my orthodox Yiddish momma who looked at Diahann and said, 'Fine, I can use her.' Monday, Wednesday and Friday.' Then, Diahann became a star in 'Julia' and she said about my mother, 'I can use her Monday, Wednesday and Friday.'"

At the Las Vegas Dunes Hotel, Rouvaun makes only one change in his routine during the "Casino de Paris" spectacular. He sings "Eli Eli" each Friday night for the Shabos and he isn't even Jewish... At the Las Vegas Riviera Hotel, Dean Martin said, "In the words of Sammy Davis Jr., who said to the rabbi, 'You're gonna cut off my what?'"

A movie, "The Legend of the Juggler," shooting in Yugoslavia in the town of Bled, is using monks for some scenes. Half of the monks are Jewish, I'm told, but that sounds more like monks-ee business than showbiz.

Jerome Edwards, 20th-Fox Studios general counsel, has been named to his fourth year as general chairman of the motion pictures and amusements division of the Anti-Defamation League.

How do you get a part in Universal's tv show, "Name of the Game?" Bump into the mother of producer George Eckstein in a store and start talking. That's how Dorothy Lamour got her role.

Woody Allen organized a Broadway softball team and called it "Schlissel's Schleppers." They lost three opening games. They're Schleppers alright.

If you're planning a vacation in Freeport, on the Grand Bahama Island, don't pack any lox and bagels. The King's Inn serves it, thanks to President Morris Lansburgh, who carries on in his best Florida hotel tradition.

What's a nice Jewish boy like Sammy Davis Jr. doing playing an Irish cop in the Beverly Hillbillies? . . . French producer Claude Berri used his own marriage experiences in his film "Mazel Tov."

Rep. Frank J. Brasco (Dem. N.Y.) is heading a group of 10 Representatives who are pushing for a resolution that would make it illegal to use bigotry on tv or radio. Sic 'em, tigers!

Hal Kanter reports the appearance of bumper stickers reading, "Golda Meir Is a Shiksa!" . . . Hal also tongue-in-cheek, "Director Dick Fleischer's nephew will read from the 20th-Fox movie, 'Toral Toral Toral' at his Bar Mitzvah, Mitzvah, Mitzvah."

In a phone interview with Dustin Hoffman's mother here in Hollywood, she said, "Dustin was married to former ballerina Anne Byrne in May, as you probably read in the papers. Although Anne isn't Jewish, she agreed to a ceremony by a rabbi in Temple Beth El, a cobblestone synagogue in up state Chappaqua, New York.

"The bride's parents were charmed by the services and congratulated the rabbi. It was the first time they had ever attended a Jewish ceremony."

This is "Dusty's" first marriage; the second for Anne. He's 31; she's 25. She has a three-year-old daughter.

Jan Murray and Lainie Kazan costar in the perfect Jewish casting for "Love and War - Israeli Style" . . .

Jackson Amador County, California, where in 1968 a plaque paid tribute to the local bordellos but not to the cemetery that remains. The synagogue has disappeared from sight and faded from memory.
