DAN LARSON FOR UNIV. REGENT

Former U.N.L.V. professor Dan R. Larson, who has filed for University Regent in the coming election, announced that his campaign will be based on presenting solutions to the problems facing higher education in Nevada in the seventies. Larson stated that in general there are two problems: first, the national crisis striking many campuses in the form of strikes, demonstrations, and sometimes violence; second, the necessity for the university system to continue to develop to meet the needs of Nevada's growing population.

two years an officer of the major faculty organization, the American Association of University Professors, and has served successfully on numerous university committees, particularly those involving student rights and grievances.

Mr. Larson has two children, Kimon and Danika; he and his wife Rosalie live here in Las Vegas.

Jim Santini, former Clark County public defender, lectured in Dallas this week

"The solutions begin," Larson stated, "when two qualities are present in the universities' regents — experience and the ability to communicate both outside the campus with citizens and legislators and within it with students, faculty and administrators."

"I filed for the office of Regent," he continued, "because I believe I possess those two needed qualities."

Larson has eleven years experience in university education including service here at the University of Nevada, Las Vegas, in the Department of English from 1967 until this summer when he resigned. While teaching here he has been for the past before some of the nation's leading attorneys on problems encountered by public defenders. He also discussed habeas corpus practices of the various states before the Practising Lawyer's Institute during sessions being held at Southern Methodist University. Santini previously has lectured on the problems of public defenders' offices before the American Bar Association.
