

ISRAEL TO COOPERATE WITH OTHER NATIONS

JERUSALEM (WNS) — Israel has signed technical agreements with the Organization of American States and the Netherlands in moves that further the program of scientific, economic and social cooperation with other nations.

The scientific cooperation agreement with the Netherlands, signed in The Hague, calls for research in the life sciences to be carried out at the Weizmann Institute and at a number of Dutch institutions. The Netherlands government is providing $24,000 to finance the program, the first it has allocated funds for outside of Holland. The two-year compact with the OAS, signed in Washington, by Israeli Ambassador Yitzhak Rabin and representatives of the OAS, will expand Israel's technical assistance to Latin America. Jerusalem has allocated $250,000 for rural development projects and the Inter-American Bank has earmarked $500,000.

Israeli teams will carry out projects to help rural communities in Latin America carry out economic and social development programs. Israel has been engaged in such activities in cooperation with the OAS for the past four years in several Caribbean and Central-American republics.

A similar program in Cambodia has been disrupted by the fighting in that nation. Four Israeli agricultural extension experts have been instructing Cambodian farmers in methods to grow more rice and develop crops in the dry season.

Cambodian farmers have been reluctant to come to an experimental farm at Prek Thnot following the blowing up of a bridge by the Viet Cong just below the facility during a recent battle for Kampong Speu. One Israeli, who lived on a kibbutz near the Gaza Strip, said that fighting never stopped Israeli farmers. They went to their fields with guns but never missed a day of work no matter what the Arab terrorists did, he said.

The Israeli experts reported that they have helped the Cambodians grow more rice through the use of fertilizers and disease and pest control. The Asian farmers have also diversified into new crops such as fruit, vegetables, sugar cane, cotton and jute.

The OAS program calls for training courses in Israel for Latin American agronomists, an experimental citrus plantation in Uruguay, new settlements linking Brazil's capital of Brasilia with Belo Horizonte and rural development projects in Paraguay.

Also planned are a conference on urbanization and ecology in Rehovoth in August, 1971, and the possible establishment of an arid-land institute with Argentina, Chile and Mexico.
