From Dr. Emanuel Neumann
Chairman, Jewish Agency -- American Section

We pray for a real peace, one in which there will be sincere meeting of the minds between the nations of the Middle East. That is our dream as we exchange New Year greetings on the Holiest of our Holidays; as we join together in prayer for spiritual renewal and moral regeneration.

As we approach the New Year, 5731, we are grateful for the peace in Israel -- such as it is -- that is a part of the current cease-fire arrangement. We rejoice in the peace, for Jews, since time immemorial, have always been a peace loving people.

But we are not unmindful of the terror that lurks in the shadow of the cease-fire arrangement. Nor are we unaware of the sacrifices that are urged upon Israel, even by its friends, in the name of a peace that may at best be very ephemeral.

We trust that Israel's sacrifices of the past years, and its faith in the acceptance of American promises, will not have been in vain. We pray that a just and durable peace is in the making, one that will guarantee Israel's future within boundaries that will insure its security.

We hope that President Nixon will take the actions to implement the feelings of the great American public that Israel deserves and must be given all the American support that is necessary for its preservation.

As the Shofar sounds again, we American Jews reaffirm our unalterable support of the people and government of Israel as it suffers through another time of great crisis and decision. We pledge our continued aid, both economic and political. We again assert that peace in the Middle East is dependent upon a meeting and agreement between Israel and its Arab neighbors.
