Jews in Uniform

By Rabbi Samuel Silver

May the day come when Jews will no longer have to wear uniforms.

But until the gladsome day of world peace, many Jews have no choice.

This world is full of Jewish war veterans. This March New York City will be the scene of an unusual gathering of Jewish veterans from all over the world.

Sponsored by the Jewish War Veterans of the U.S.A., whose current commander, Albert Schlossberg, of Boston, is a person of dynamism and devotion to Yiddishkeit, the international convocation will bring delegations from Israel, South Africa, France, Canada, England, Belgium, and Australia.

The global group will tour the United Nations, be greeted by our nation's top leaders, visit Washington and stage conferences on the best way to uphold the sacred cause of human dignity.

The convocation will mark the 75th birthday of the JWV, our nation's oldest veterans' group. Simultaneously, the Association of Jewish Chaplains of the Armed Forces will observe its 25th anniversary.

In synagogues throughout the nation rabbis who served in uniform will be honored at worship services. The key Sabbath events will occur on Friday, March 12 and Saturday, March 13. At a gathering rabbis who have served for twenty-five years as chaplains in the armed forces or reserves will be honored at a solemn but joyful gathering.

The two organizations, the JWV and the chaplains' association, will stage several joint meetings during the week-long international convention planned by the JWV for themselves and their comrades from all over the world.

There will be many prayers voices at the gathering for the time when Jews will no longer have to wear military garb.

NEW YORK --The Association of Orthodox Jewish Scientists expresses concern over the campaign to obtain permissive legislation on abortion which has presented abortion as an option fully as acceptable as childbirth.

NEW YORK--Abe Marks, Vice President, Fabrics National, Inc., has been named as the 1970 recipient of the American Jewish Committee's Human Relations Award, it was announced by Andrew Goodman, President of Bergdorf Goodman and National General Chairman of the AJC's Appeal for Human Relations.

NEW YORK --The bombing of Russian offices in New York City is not only immoral in itself but it also "plays into the hands of the anti-Semitic elements in the Russian politburo," Rabbi Marc Tanenbaum of American Jewish Committee declared.
