We're just two days past the first day of Chanukah and it just happens to be Christmas day. This happens to be an extra special day for us because a little baby with beautiful big eyes stared at me some eight years ago in Beverly Hills. Yes, Jilly Weiss was born 9 years ago on Christmas day. She is smarter than her father Gibby, and also her grandparents. Do you know why? This kid has been out of work for the past nine year.

Gotta give special thanks to Jimmy Moore (Frontier Pit) for encouraging us to have a wonderful evening listening to Wayne Newton. The antics of Wayne's brother were very entertaining and the standing ovation at the close of the show was well deserved. Comedian Jackie Kahane warmed up the audience with good humor. This whole show is clean and yes, you can bring the kids. Captain Tony went out of his way to be nice and our very fine waitress told us the distressing news about favorite waitress Nellis Mulrooney who was viciously attacked by a burglar at her home. Nellis will have to stay home for a few weeks to recuperate, however she assured me over the phone that she was feeling better and she wished me a happy Chanukah and we wished her a Happy Xmas.

Ronald D'Hondt and Seymour Merrin tripped me on the way outside to make sure that we spend a few happy moments listening to the originator of insult humor, Mr. Jack E. Leonard. Fat Jack was in rare form and we enjoyed. We were teased by pretty waitresses Margaritha and Leila. They both came over to say "Where's Miriam?" My wife is lucky. She has friends all over town who watch over her interest, which is me.

Whenever we get together with my nutty friends we always pick up a gem or two. Bill Bray the genius in charge of the Public Relations at the Tropicana sent us a picture of him and his "family". It was only twenty-two nakidah medlich (this means naked broads).

Love the story that Cy Newman tells me when we asked him about his former business. "I used to be in mens pants but it didn't fit my personality, so now I'm in ladies underwear." All we can say Cy on you it looks good.

The Sahara Hotel is way way out this past week because of their annual Celebration. We went over to Bob Joyce who is handling the giveaways and handed him my parking ticket. This very funny man shouted out over the microphone "another winner - please go to the front door and you are pretty sure to get a car". Yes, Bob has a quick, ready sense of humor.

Must commend Howie Hughes for getting our town all this nice publicity. For a shy guy he certainly gets his name in the papers. Thankfully they spell Las Vegas right all over the world. Do you guys and gals remember when Paul Getty, who is also a rich guy, made the headlines by putting pay telephones in his 90 room cottage in England? Don't feel bad Getty boy, my friend Sam Mannis is installing a pay toilet in the extra bathroom in his home.

Gotta stop now to wish all of you Happy Chanukah and a Merry Xmas. More Kabaret next week.

To my everloving sisters Frances, Sylvia, Hilda Annie and Laura: Thank you for worrying about me. Miriam and I worry about you and send our Love.
