

Clean Power Patrol has just doubled its size.

You probably won't notice that the air over Las Vegas will be a little cleaner ...

But it will be a little cleaner.

Last September, Southwest Gas introduced "the non-smokers" to the Las Vegas scene. This was the gas company's fleet of natural gas fueled service vans, named the Clean Power Patrol.

The name is appropriate. These service vans run on clean-burning natural gas. They are virtually smogless, actually reducing exhaust contaminants up to 90%!

The Clean Power Patrol has lived up to its name.

So successfully, in fact, that we have just converted more of our vehicles to natural gas operation. This doubles the fleet.

Unfortunately, the reduction in air pollution will be hardly discernible. But the Clean Power Patrol is a drive in the right direction.

It is our hope other fleet operators will switch to clean-burning natural gas. Then everyone will breathe a little easier.
