PROBLEM OF JEWISH YOUTH

Dr. William A. Wexler, International President of the B'nai B'rith, said at the triennial convening of that organization: "Bright, articulate, Jewishly-committed young men and women are resisting a Jewish community they regard as overwhelmed with form and structure and barren of substance."

He finds a part of the solution to this problem in a new coalition he calls "nonpartisan, liberal," ethnic-racial-religious-labor. This, of course, includes about everything in American life. A vital part of this new grouping would be a closing of the gap between the Jews and the blacks which developed when the black revolution turned "inward and separatist" and caused "harshness and penalty to Jews." By the latter Dr. Wexler means attacks on Jewish merchants and ousting of Jewish teachers.

Is this the motivation for a sincere alliance? Or should it be one based first on mutual understanding of the needs and aspirations of both groups? It is a moot matter whether young Jews would join a coalition to salvage the cause of Jewish merchants and teachers. By his every statement it would seem that Dr. Wexler reinforces his own claim that "many Jewish youths are not alienated. They are accessible to us. The crucial problem is: Are we accessible to them?" And the answer is no. To paraphrase Dr. Wexler, in this kind of cause young Jews will find not less but more preaching from Jewish pulpits, more not less glibness from Jewish Presidents, more not less catering at bar mitzvahs and less not more genuine Jewish involvement in the struggle for peace and for racial and social equality.

Enjoy Rabbi Samuel Silver

By RABBI MORTON M. APPLEBAUM

Readers of this newspaper are familiar with the name, Rabbi Samuel Silver.

He is, of course, more than a name. He is a live, throbbing human being whom some of you may know personally, since he is often on the lecture circuit.

Rabbi Silver was my classmate at the Reform Jewish Seminary in Cincinnati. He and I collaborated on a book, "Sermonettes for Young People." I have spoken at his congregation, Temple Sinai, Stamford, Conn., and he has addressed my people.

I write this column to notify you that a notable literary even has just occurred involving the columnist-rabbi. A book he wrote, HOW TO ENJOY THIS MOMENT, which appeared under the Trident Press imprimatur some years ago, has just re-appeared in paperback, courtesy Cornerstone Library.

This is a remarkable book and I urge you ITS RENEWAL TIME RIGHT NOW I FORGOT TO SEND MY SUBSCRIPTION IN TO LAS VEGAS ISRAELITE - P.O. BOX 14096 LAS VEGAS, NEVADA 89114

TEL AVIV (WNS)--One of Israel's chief tasks in this generation is to increase its population from 3 million to six million, former Premier David Ben-Gurion said on the day after his 85th birthday.

NEW YORK--The American Jewish Congress and the American Civil Liberties Union announced they would sponsor suits in six states to halt state aid to parochial schools on the basis of the U.S. Supreme Court's decision.

PHILADELPHIA (WNS)--"There is little validity in our being the Jewish power structure if we deny the Jewish future," Dr. William A. Wexler, international president of B'nai B'rith said in advising the organization's triennial convention that Jewish collegians "are the innovators of a Jewish counter-culture which wants less preaching from Jewish pulpits, less glibness from Jewish presidents, less catering at bar mitzvahs and more genuine Jewish involvement in the struggle for peace and social equality."
