

American College

By RABBI SAMUEL SILVER

It is a source of wonder that the dangers surrounding the State of Israel do not cause fright among Jews.

More tourists than ever before are thronging the Jewish state, and aliya, or permanent immigration, is at an all time-high. All this, despite the threats from enemies and despite the fact that wherever you are in Israel you are on the border -- of an enemy land.

Also remarkable is the growth of the cultural institutions in Israel.

One of the most notable is that American College in Jerusalem, the school your children can attend and carry on their studies in the English language.

Created by a group of Americans, the college has now won the leadership of one of this nation's outstanding rabbis: Dr. Avraham Soltes.

Rabbi Soltes is a gifted and versatile educator who has lectured and written much -- and now is determined to strengthen the link between the U.S. and Israel by adding new sinews to the college.

That College, whose New York office is at 888 7th Ave., New York City, has a new campus, an enlarged curriculum and a superb faculty. Funds are coming to the College through an interesting procedure: thousands of people are "lending" the school their Israeli Bonds.

Highly rated, the American College in Jerusalem would be an ideal place for any collegian you know to study and to get acquainted with the exciting land of Israel. We wish it well.
