

ARAB NEWSPAPER PROPOSES WAR

JERUSALEM (WNS) --Mohammed Heikal, the powerful editor of the Cairo daily Al Ahram, proposed in his column that Egypt open a limited war against Israel to bring pressure to bear on the Soviet Union to supply it with all the help it has asked. Heikal, who is close to President Sadat said if only 100 square kilometers-- about 38 miles of the 11, 350 square miles of the Israeli-held Sinai could be regained by a military thrust, the USSR might reconsider both its veto Egyptian plans for renewed war against Israel and give Egypt the weapons it requests. Heikal said openly that the Soviets had not complied with all Egyptian requests for arms and warned Egypt against resumption of war with Israel. Heikal said the Israelis also would learn a lesson from a limited but effective attack in the Sinai and be more amenable to Egyptian demands. He noted that both the Soviet Union and the United States oppose any major new conflict out of fear of their becoming involved.

But a limited war for a specific goal would not be in that category, the editor said.
