

ZEL LOWMAN ATTENDS DEFENSE SEMINAR AT NATL. WAR COLLEGE

Washington, D. C. -- Zelvin D. Lowman, a Captain in the United States Naval Reserve and Resident of 1246 Cashman Drive, Las Vegas, Nevada, has completed the two-week Defense Strategy Seminar while on active duty for training at The National War College.

The Defense Strategy Seminar, held annually at the College since 1959 deals with the major aspects of national security. The curriculum is based on the subjects presented in the graduate level course conducted each year at the National War College for senior career officers on active duty in the various services and civilian executives from the various federal government agencies.

Captain Lowman is one of some 250 senior officers chosen from the National Guard and from the Army, Air Force, Navy and Marine Corps to attend the Seminar this year.

Lt. Gen. John B. McPherson, USAF, commandant of The National War College, noted that selection to attend DSS "represents a special distinction given only to extremely well qualified officers from throughout the United States."

In civilian life, Captain Lowman is Public Relations Director for Nevada Power Company and a Nevada Legislator. He is qualified for command either afloat or ashore and since being selected Captain in 1964 has served during training duty periods on two aircraft carriers, at the U.S. Naval Academy, in the Washington offices of the Chief of Naval Information and the Chief of Legislative Affairs, on the staff of Commander in Chief, Pacific, at the Naval War College in Newport Rhode Island and now at the National War College. His Reserve assignment is Naval Academy Information Officer for Nevada a member of the seapower speakers team of the Chief of Naval Operations.
