Vice-President Agnew at a press conference following his re-nomination for the same post by the Republican Convention - in referring to his support of the decision to omit a plank recommending the Nixon Administration transfer of the U.S. Embassy to Jerusalem, said the move would be "counter-productive." He added it would "have to lead to much understanding among the parties to the truce "in the Middle East."

Taken apart from developments, this might have been a simple statement of politically unmotivated fact. However, in view of Mr. Agnew's newly-minted image of unifier, one wonders whether there is a connection with the

ROSE MATZKIN HADASSAH PRES.

NEW YORK (WNS) -- Mrs. Rose Matzkin of Waterbury, Conn. was elected president of Hadassah, the Women's Zionist Organization of America, at the closing session of the organization's 58th annual national convention. She succeeds Mrs. Faye L. Schenck of New York who served four one-year terms. The convention adopted resolutions calling for continued U.S. support for Israel and Leadership in the UN protesting Soviet policy towards Jews, & urging a crackdown on airline terrorism.

the 3,500 delegates heard reports on the establishment of the Hadassah Vocational Guidance Institute to aid immigrant students; that the Hadassah Medical Organization was planning to build a special guest house for overseas patients and their families on the medical center campus at Ein Karem, Jerusalem; and of the creation of a 4 year bachelor of science course for nurses training at the Hadassah Henrietta Szold School for Nursing.

At earlier sessions, Soviet ouster from Egypt. With Russian departure, some of the pressure is off the U.S. to support Israel. It is also likely that oil interests, always a powerful lobby, might ask for a shift in balance to what has been called an "even-handed" Policy.

Not that George McGovern's policy on this point is any clearer or sharper but in the event of the re-election of Mr. Nixon, the Jewish community would have to be on the alert for any sudden and substantive change in attitude towards what the President in his acceptance speech only generally referred to as the Middle East.

Negro attorney in our state. As a judge, Reid has been absolutely fearless in rendering decisions. There are no favorites in his courtroom. He is as strict and severe in reprimanding a prosecuting attorney as he is with defense counsel. Every accused gets a fair shake with Bob Reid. He belongs right where he is.

We have studied, with care, the qualifications of the candidates running for the one seat on the Nevada Supreme Court, and believe Leonard Root is the man most deserving of our vote. He has the background and the stamina, but mainly, after meeting with him, he has the compassion to judge his fellow man. This is what we look for most in a justice on the highest court of our state.

In the competition for District Judge, Eighth Judicial District, Department No. 9, the name of John W. Bonner cannot escape our notice. There are three candidates seeking this seat. It is our opinion that Bonner is the man with the experience and qualifications. He has spent 34 years as a lawyer, district attorney, U.S. Attorney for Nevada, special assistant attorney general and an alternate municipal judge for City of Las Vegas. He is our choice.

The assembly races pose a problem. We doubt if 90 percent of the voters are even aware of the candidates in their district. The confusion, of course, was brought on by the reapportionment of the last state legislature. There are 150 candidates seeking 22 seats. We have analyzed, to the best of our ability most of the backgrounds and platforms of the political hopefuls, and have made the following determinations:

In Assembly, District 9, Thalia Dondero, although never before a candidate for public office, has devoted so much of her time, effort and money in successful civic, educational and charitable ventures, she is an outstanding choice. She has lobbied before the legislature for many benefits we all are enjoying. She pledges to continue to fight for many more improvements we all desire for our every day life. She cannot be anything less than a tremendous advantage to every citizen and resident.

Zel Lowman, running for re-election in Assembly, District 5, has earned a background of participation in civic and public ventures, second to none. We refer specifically to his activity in behalf of Boy Scouting and his efforts to combat the drug problem.

Edward Young, candidate in Assembly, District 13, has been active in community projects for a long time, including 15 years as member of Nev. Tuberculosis & Respiratory Disease Asso., and a five year member of Clark County District Board of Health. Ed is also past president of both the P.T.A. and Las Vegas B'nai B'rith.

For State Board of Education, Sub-District A, we find Joseph M. Kadans a man with superior qualifications. He is president of a private university, with doctorate degrees in psychology philosophy, theology and naturopathy. In addition, he is a practicing attorney before the federal bar in Nevada. We know Joe personally and believe he is the greatest humanitarian in Las Vegas. He is a good and kind man, in addition to his attributes as a community servant.

And so, we offer you our selections for the Primary Election on Sept. 5. While we urge you, in every respect to determine for yourself, the candidates of your choice, we hope you have some knowledge of those who get your votes. May the best parties emerge victorious.

The Las Vegas City Commission, by 3 to 2 vote, approved application of Thriftmart Stores to operate slot machines. The ISRAELITE had advocated its passage and we are grateful.

WASHINGTON (WNS) -- Sen. George McGovern has rejected the endorsement of presidential campaign by M.T. Mehdi of New York secretary-general of the Action Committee on American-Arab-Relations.
