

D.A. COLLECTS FORFEITED BAIL BONDS

The District Attorney Office has collected $9,870 in forfeited bail bonds -- some as many as two years old -- in the past three months, announced District Attorney Roy Woolfer.

Collection of another $1000, which is expected to be paid by a bonding company shortly will mean for the first time in history there will be no outstanding forfeited bail bonds in Clark County, said Woolfer.

For year, bail bonds that had been forfeited were collected sporadically, if at all, said Woolfer.

Bail bonds, deposited with the court to insure a defendant's appearance, become forfeit in 90 days if the defendant does not appear in court as ordered.

If the defendant does not appear, it is the responsibility of the District Attorney's office to collect the money said Woolfer.

A statute of limitations prevents collection of bonds that have been forfeited longer than two years.

Money collected from bonding companies is deposited in the County treasury, said Woolfer.
