

SOVIET JEWISH NEWS

TEL AVIV (WNS) -- The opening of a world wide campaign to exert pressure on the Soviet government to grant an exit visa to noted electro chemist Benjamin Levich, was announced by Tel Aviv University. Letters were sent to 500 noted scientists asking for their help.

The Belgium government protested officially the Soviet exit charges for Jewish scientists as "a direct attack against the fundamental liberty of man to choose for himself."

In Washington, Sen. Abraham Ribicoff (D. Conn.) appealed to both Houses of Congress to "go on record" in "making clear our strong opposition to any trade legislation granting the Soviet government better trade terms as long as the ransom decree" and "similar draconian measures" are applied to restrict the emigration of Soviet Jews. The B'nai B'rith revealed it had requested Presidential advisor Henry Kissinger too "vigorously protest" the Soviet Union's "exorbitant exit tax" against educated Soviet citizens seeking to emigrate.

One hundred Soviet Jews renounced their citizenship to protest what they termed "the failure of the Soviet government to denounce or even condemn the Munich outrage."

Three Jewish families who arrived in Israel from the Soviet Union said that 70 percent of the Jewish college graduates who want to emigrate to Israel will be prevented from doing so because of the new exit visa fees. But a Dutch member of Amnesty International who recently visited the US SR said that the high exit fees are encouraging more Russian Jews to emigrate.

MEYER LANSKY EXPELLED FROM ISRAEL

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- A five-member Supreme Court panel unanimously upheld a Government order to expel Meyer Lansky, reputed US gangland boss, who had sought refuge in Israel under the Law of Return.

The Court ruled that the Interior Ministry had ample grounds to support its decision that Lansky had "a criminal past likely to endanger the public welfare."

The alleged underworld czar, who is 70, came to Israel in 1970 on a tourist visa. When the Government refused to renew the visa last year, Lansky applied for citizenship under the Law of Return which states the right of all Jews to live in Israel.

That exception was applied in an 83-page judgment prepared by Justice Shimon Agron, President of the Supreme Court and concurred in by the four other justices sitting on the case.

Lansky was present in the court and appeared disquieted by the ruling. The Court ordered him to pay $500 in costs. Justice Agron praised Lansky's counsel, Yoram Alroi of Tel Aviv for his pleading on behalf of his client but added that the lawyer was "fighting a lost cause."
