

U.N. FAILS ON TERRORISM RESOLUTION

UNITED NATIONS and effectively." Tekoah said the Afro-Asian - Arab - Soviet backed resolution was "a further indication that the United Nations has reached a point of virtual incapacity to deal seriously and constructively with the principal problems which today confront the international community," and that governments interested in combatting international terrorism, "must consequently act on their own or in regional cooperation."

The 15-nation resolution was seen as a victory for the Arab-Soviet bloc and non-aligned nations which had sought to thwart any concerted effort to curb international terrorism.

U.S. Delegate Ambassador W. Tapley Bennett, Jr. warned that the UN was evading its responsibilities and "an immediate world problem." Israeli officials in Jerusalem said the resolution, following on the heels of another Arab-inspired resolution adopted by the Assembly last week, has "put a sad end" to prospects that the UN would contribute anything to the advancement of peace in the Middle East.

Meanwhile, in New York Rep. Herman Badillo (D. NY) urged the U. S. to take "unilateral action to protect our own citizens" in view of the UN's failure to approve strong international legal action on terrorism.

Capt. John Ferguson, Air Line Pilots Association representative, said continued acts of air terrorism could be traced to "the greed and immaturity of pilots, airline managements and governments."

The Zionist Organization of America urged the U. S. to convene a conference of concerned nations -- outside the framework of the UN -- to enact multilateral anti-terrorism treaties.
