TEL AVIV (WNS) --

The stormy political petrol that fueled an internal conflict in Herut during its 11th conven-
bittered with faction-ridden dissention.Early in the convention two rival factions emerged -- one around Ezer Weizman, chairman of the Herut Executive, and the other around Menachem Beigin, the party's veteran leader.By the end of the convention, Weizman resigned from the Executive and Beigin retained his grip on the party and was re-elected to the top leadership post.Weizman, the former Air Force commander and Transport Minister, said he resigned because a party cannotfunction without total harmony. He did not resign from the party be-
adhered to its ideological line.Beigin, who refused to accept Weizman's resignation, was forced to make an impassioned speech to the 250-member Herut Central Committee to regain his position after the party's young Turks rallied around Weizman and appeared to swamp Beigin's supporters on the Committee.During the four-day conclave, the party called for the creation of a Gahal "shadow - government" of 12 ministers so voters would know who would be implementing programs proposed by the Herut and Liberal Parties which comprise the Ga-hal bloc, called for the annexation of the West Bank, vehemently opposed an interim accord with Egypt to reopen the Suez Canal. They demanded early elections and accused the Meir Government of endangering national security by its willingness "to redivide the western
