LAS VEGAS ISRAELITE
Again, Stephen Wise

BY RABBI SAMUEL SILVER

A recent column reported that efforts are being made to urge upon the State of Israel to memorialize the late, great Rabbi Stephen Wise as we near the centenary of his birth in 1874.

The column elicited a lovely letter and photos from Rabbi and Mrs. David Greenburg of Fresno. A street in Jerusalem, near Hebrew University, was indeed named Rechov Shmuel Wise (Stephen Wise Street) back in 1962, report the Greenbergs.

At that time, we learn, the successor to Stephen Wise, the late Dr. Nelson Glueck, and the late Moshe Sharett, were among the dignitaries who helped dedicate Wise Street.

It is good to know that this happened, but I'm sure the Greenbergs will agree that even more ought to be done to honor the memory of an incomparable spokesman for world Jewry, who, for more than a half century, was the voice of Jewish idealism and the tribunal pleading with the nations of the world to allow a resurrected Judea to come to pass.

Indeed, instead of the military tararam being planned to celebrate the 25th birthday of the Jewish State, a panorama of the great creative personalities produced by Judaism would be desirable.

I agree that the "fighting Jew" is an admirable phenomenon, but "the thinking Jew" or "the articulate Jew" might well be extolled.

Instead of a procession of missiles and heavy arms, wouldn't it be nice to have a series of floats glorifying Herzl and Einstein, Salk and Sabin, Agnon and Maurice Samuel, Rabbis Wise and A. H. Silver, et al, etc.,?
