UN Ignores Terrorism

The United Nation's 35-member committee on international terrorism seems to be in no hurry to find a way to combat terrorism. Although it is supposed to come up with concrete recommendations by the time the General Assembly convenes in September, the committee met on each of the first two sessions for only 15 minutes and on the third day was in session for a half hour and then adjourned without setting a date for the next meeting.

International terrorism is one of the most immediate dangers confronting the world today. Countless innocent people throughout the globe are in jeopardy daily because someone feels his cause gives him the right to kill, kidnap, hijack or bomb. From July 16-20 alone, 17 persons were held hostage for four hours by an Arab terrorist, five persons were injured when a bomb exploded in a Jerusalem marketplace and grenades were found in two Haifa movie houses and a Tiberias beach. Let's not forget the murder of Israeli Air Attache Yosef Alon outside his suburban Washington home. And perhaps the committee needs a reminder that it was created in the wake of the massacre of 11 Israeli athletes at the Olympic Games in Munich.

Maybe the committee, which includes five Arab states but not Israel, is only confirming expectations that it would not do anything concrete. The General Assembly established the body last December over the objections of the United States and other countries who claimed it was a delaying tactic. The Arab states, joined by the Soviet and African blocs, had defeated a proposal for a convention on the prevention and punishment of terrorism.

Israel justly wants such an international agreement that would prevent nations from sheltering or assisting terrorists while requiring them to extradite the terrorists or put them on trial. The United States and other nations have correctly pointed out that the committee could study the causes of terrorism as it was asked to do by the Assembly, but that this is no reason to prevent acting on ending international criminal violence now.

The terrorists may be watching the international community to see how far they will be allowed to go in carrying on their bloody deeds. Is it too much to suggest that the lackadaisical manner of the committee encouraged the latest acts of terrorism?

KISSINGER STRUCK OUT WITH BREZHNEV

"MAX FISHER OF DETROIT, A JEWISH COMMUNAL LEADER, JACOB STEIN, CHAIRMAN OF THE CONFERENCE OF PRESIDENTS OF MAJOR AMERICAN JEWISH ORGANIZATIONS, AND RICHARD MAASS, CHAIRMAN OF THE NATIONAL CONFERENCE ON SOVIET JEWRY, MET WITH DR. HENRY KISSINGER, FOR OVER ONE HOUR. DR. KISSINGER REPORTED ON DEVELOPMENTS SINCE THE SUMMIT. HE EXPECTED THE RELEASE OF LARGE NUMBERS OF SOVIET JEWS WHOSE NAMES WERE SUBMITTED BY HIM TO MR. BREZHNEV IN MOSCOW, IN MAY. WE EXPRESSED DISAPPOINTMENT IN THE LACK OF VISIBLE RESULTS TO DATE. DR. KISSINGER SAID THAT ADMINISTRATION EFFORTS WOULD CONTINUE."

You will too when you read Sam Levenson's newest book, "In One Era and Out The Other."

A sequel to his other book, "Everything But Money," Mr. Levenson continues to amuse us with his memories of his childhood when a wise mother and a hard-working father reared him and his six brothers and sisters.

You know Sam Levenson, of course.

He's one of the world's wittiest men and he has a store of anecdotes that will keep anyone laughing.

Why Mr. Levenson doesn't have his own TV show I'll never know. It's due to the fact, perhaps, that the TV industry shuns many people who really have something wonderful to share.

Published by Simon & Schuster, the new book not only tells more stories about his Mama, but is also an account of Sam Levenson's life as teacher, entertainer, husband, father and grand-father.

Yes, it's good lots of humor, like the story about the time his mother didn't have enough food for company and told the children to say they didn't like chicken. Starved, they did. And when it was time for dessert, Mama said, "All those who didn't eat the main course can't have dessert."

But in addition to hundreds of anecdotes of this kind, the Levenson book contains much wisdom. The author has much to say about honesty and learning and character. Much of the book is addressed to the younger generation and this delightful teacher, Mr. Levenson, makes the lessons most palatable.

So I recommend this book heartily, for its delightful contents. What a fine gift it would make for any occasion.

It is uplifting and rib-tickling. It contains a mixture of the light and serious which is most judicious. Or should I say "Jew-dicious."

TELL TALES

"One Man Plus The Truth Constitutes A Majority"

BY JACK TELL

Medlin returned from his vacation, and under auspices of the D.A.'s office a press conference was held. Nothing improper was revealed. This past week Medlin announced he was quitting his job and was going to parts unknown. He said he was disgusted by the treatment he had received from the press, for no reason whatsoever.

After the press conference held upon Medlin's return from vacation, here was Price's statement: "District Attorney Roy Woofter's office is in damn sad shape."

Now here is the crux of the point we are attempting to bring forth.

Price boldly stated: "I first reported the account 10 days ago and labeled it for exactly what it was --- an unsubstantiated report."

Paul went on: "In the meantime, Sun reporters and Chuck Thompson, the chief deputy to Woofter could not substantiate anything AND I HAD NO FURTHER MENTION." (The caps are ours.)

That's exactly what happened.

First: Price prints a story and justifies his assertion because he labeled it a rumor. Can you imagine what we could state in the guise of calling it a rumor? Suppose we claimed: "It is rumored Mr. So and So, a respectable business man, raped an eight-year-old girl." Let us further suppose that the rumor was proven unfounded --- AND WE HAD NO FURTHER MENTION OF THE FACT. Just what does this do to the reputation of Mr. So and So?

Second: What right has Paul or any newspaper man to report on a man who is vacationing, whether it is rumor or fact? Of course if he were engaged in anything illegal, was arrested, etc., it would be a news story worthy of printing.

Third: Even if Medlin was involved in a serious crime, why should Price point the finger at the D.A.'s office? Certainly, an employer cannot be held responsible for an employee on vacation.

We call attention that in each instance Price sought to embarrass persons for apparent personal reasons. The D.I. is a Hughes Hotel, and the animosity of the Sun and Price against Howard Hughes is well known. Paul's feelings about D.A. Roy Woofter need little explaining. It was Woofter who swore to the Clark County Grand Jury that Price attempted to "shake him down."

We cannot, under any circumstances, condone the actions of Paul Price in these two incidents, under freedom of the press or the rules of journalism.

BONN (WNS) -- A senior delegation of the German - Israel Association of West Germany will visit Israel from June 25 to 30 to discuss sensitive issues.
