NO ISRAELI HOUSING FOR SINGLE IMMIGRANTS

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- The number of singles applying for aliya is declining because unmarried immigrants are not getting a fair deal in housing, according to participants at a meeting of more than 200 singles here. They complained that there is no government-sponsored housing with small apartments for the unmarried.

Yitzhak Wolfson, deputy director of the Ministry of Absorption's Jerusalem office said the housing shortage was general and also affected families. He advised the singles to go to development town where housing is available.

But Eliezer Kroll, a senior official of the Jewish Agency's immigration department, said the singles were right to complain and advised them to become more vocal and exercise pressure on the government.

Meanwhile a study by the Central Bureau of Statistics found that 15% of the 7,500 adult immigrants and potential immigrants who arrived in Israel between September and December 1969 left the country by the end of the third year.

Of the remainder, 88% definitely had decided to stay and 9% were not sure. This group is most satisfied with housing, according to the study, and less so with their jobs.

The Absorption Ministry reports a 50% increase in the employment of immigrant scientists and academic workers and said this is due to the ministry's special projects fund which pays part of the immigrants' salaries during the first year.
