GOLDA MEIR WARNS OF RENEWED WAR SOVIETS REPLACED ARMS ARABS LOST

Great Grand Hotel

DINO

After pre-viewing the majestic MGM Grand Hotel, superlatives would be superfluous to describe the features of the newest addition to the Las Vegas Skyline.

Therefore, we will confine ourselves to bare, naked statistics and let the wonderment be taken from them.

The Hotel will be officially opened on Wednesday, Dec. 5, with Dean Martin starring in the 1200 seat Celebrety Room. Succeeding JERUSALEM (WNS) -- Premier Golda Meir warned here that Egypt and Syria were threatening to resume hostilities and Israel must be prepared for that eventuality.

She told a plenary meeting of the World Zionist Executive that the Soviet Union has replaced all the equipment the Egyptians and Syrians lost in the Yom Kippur War and "they do not count their casualties."

Her warning followed reports that the Egyptian Army has completed its deployment facing the Israeli lines on the West bank of the Suez Canal. Israel military experts said the Egyptian forces could be transformed from a defensive to an offensive line in several hours.

However, in Washington, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger indicated that the participants, time and place of a peace conference would be announced soon. He denied reports of U. S. pressure on Israel but said a Middle East settlement would have to contain elements of Israeli withdrawal, security arrangements and outside guarantees. He said that the Palestinians and the future status of Jerusalem would also figure in the negotiations.

"We hope that Israel and the Arab countries" clearly see that "a military solution is impossible," Kissinger said. He said the "appropriate auspices" for the conference "could best be provided by the United States and the Soviet Union" and should be "generally blessed" by the United Nations. He said "to be effective" the conference should be left the participants either in plenary sessions or in bilateral meeting where Israel would negotiate separately with Egypt, Syria, Jordan and other states.

Oil Shortage? Phooey

When NBC-TV commentator David Brinkley told a national audience the "simple" solution to the Energy Crisis was: "The Arabs have the oil, we need it, the best thing to do is to pressure Israel into a quick settlement," he was wrong, and for a number of reasons.

First, Brinkley's candid opinion compounded the fears of an unsuspecting American public by (a) admitting the Arab oil is a disastrous blow; and (b) if it is, that the U. S. should submit and succumb to the blackmail threat much like the "Munich Appeasement" in 1938, which was just the first step.

Second, Brinkley's off-the-cuff view gave encouragement to the reviving surge of communists and Communist sympathizers in our midst, who are emerging and becoming bolder in their campaign to sell us out to the Russians.

And third, Brinkley's philosophy brought a horde of anti-Semites out of the woodwork, who use any reason or excuse to discredit and defame.

We should start by analyzing whether there is, in fact, an actual oil shortage. Here we have contradictory statements by men who should know.

Creating and enhancing the hysteria was a prediction by chairman of the board of Atlantic-Richfield Oil, Robert Anderson, who said more than 7 million Americans will be jobless in four months if the Arab boycott continues. There were complaints from industrialists who state their plants will not open unless they receive fuel from suppliers and labor unions reported layoffs commencing for lack of oil.

So much for the gloom and doom predictions, according to syndicated columnist Victor Reisel.

George Shulz does not believe we are on the brink of national disaster. He says there is no actual nationwide crunch. We believe him. He is Secretary of the Treasury.

Here are Shulz's statistics: We produce 85% of our energy and nobody can boycott us out of that. All we have to do is reduce our fuel demand by 15% by cutting unessential use without hurting the economy, by giving industry enough to maintain employment levels if it means keeping homes cooler and reducing speed of pleasure cars.

Shulz added, the boycott may be a blessing in disguise, let us not depend on the Arab sheiks, kings, emirs and sultans.

From Mel Laird, White House domestic affairs chief, we are told that U.S. can recoup 15% of our missing energy needs by upping Texas production, by using naval reserves and employing new tax techniques, just for starters.
