GENEVA WAITS WORD FROM US, USSR

GENEVA (WNS) --- The Geneva conference which first closely watched the Israeli elections is now waiting to see the results of trips by Israeli Defense Minister Moshe Dayan to the U.S. and Egyptian Foreign Minister Ismail Fahmy to the Soviet Union.

Conference circles are coming to the belief that no major progress can be made without some sort of intervention by the two superpowers.

Meanwhile the Israel and Egyptian delegations to the disengagement talks have agreed on certain basic "principles" but not how to apply them. They have agreed on the necessity of an Israeli withdrawal as the first step toward ultimate peace. But they failed to agree on how far Israel should withdraw or what concessions Egypt should make to counterbalance Israel's surrender of occupied territory.

Israel's chief negotiator Maj. Gen. Mordechai Gur, stressed that the non-observance of the ceasefire by Egypt endangers the success of the talks. But the head of the Egyptian military delegation, Maj. Gen. Tahal elMaghdaub claimed that the new incidents "make the solution of disengagement more urgent."

WASHINGTON DATELINE

BY TRUDE B. FELDMAN

ISRAELITE'S WHITE HOUSE CORRESPONDENT

Dr. Henry A. Kissinger called the Middle East crisis the most dramatic event of 1973. "It came upon us unexpectedly. We weren't warned by any foreign government," the Secretary of State said in a year-end press conference.

He said the war in the Mideast faced the U. S. with several profound issues: (1) The commitment the U.S. has had through all post war administrations to the security of Israel. (2) Our concern that another superpower not exploit the tensions in the area for its own advantage. (3) Our interest in maintaining a balanced relationship with the Arab countries. (4) The problem of the energy crisis.

Dr. Kissinger added that U.S. policy had to go through several phases: (1) The military phase--to contribute to a situation in which the post war evolution would not be determined by military success primarily, especially by military success growing out of a surprise attack and achieved with Soviet arms. (2) To conduct ourselves in such a manner that in the diplomacy that would follow the war, we would be able to talk to all the parties involved. (3) We had to conduct ourselves in such a way that the Mideast wouldn't play the role of the Balkans in 1914, in which local rivalries produced a catastrophe from which Europe never recovered, and in which under contem-

Arab Oil:

A Case of 'Simple Greed'

No matter how you look at the energy crisis. No matter how you try to analyze the Arab oil situation. No matter how you attempt to sympathize with American oil companies. It all adds up to money.

First the independent stations were knocked out to prevent price wars. Then the pre-designed Arab squeeze on American oil Company properties. Then the Arab oil blockade and the scare thrown into the world market, along with attempts to blame Israel. Then the bluff pulled on the American public with imaginary energy crisis.

Also keep in mind, the U.S. oil companies purposely refrained from building adequate domestic refineries and managed to keep those we have away from deep water ports. And to top it all, the oil companies got Congress to put through the Alaskan pipe line. You didn't think they would let conservationists stand in the way of their making billions.

They're all a bunch of phoney bums. Here's what Phil Baum had to say in a letter to the editor of the N.Y. Times. Baum is director of Commission on International Affairs of American Jewish Congress.

By Phil Baum

The doubling of petroleum prices by the Persian Gulf states graphically demonstrates that the present oil shortages have nothing to do with Israel or Middle Eastern politics. Coupled with the relaxation of the curbs imposed upon Europe and Japan, this sequence of events merely means that the Arabs will now be earning more by producing less--in the classic manner of all monopolists.

Zooming prices make it clear that the crisis is attributable to simple economic greed, and no change in American foreign policy will divert Arab oil producers from their determination to extract the last dollar from the oil-consuming public.

It is especially ironic that the oil weapon should be wielded so stringently by Saudi Arabia, with which the U.S. has a long-standing bilateral treaty guaranteeing each partner most-favored-
