Faisal's Favorite Reading

It should not be surprising that the "favorite literature" of King Faisal of Saudi Arabia is the scurrilous "Protocols of the Elders of Zion" and an anthology of anti-Semitic writing. This is how these books were described when they were presented as gifts to French journalists accompanying their Foreign Minister, Michel Jobert, to Jidda.

Faisal, whose desert Kingdom is a throwback to medieval despotism, has long been one of the most outspoken anti-Semites in the modern world. But even he outdid himself recently when in the Moslem holy city of Mecca he delivered one of the most virulent anti-Semitic speeches to come from a national ruler since the days of Hitler. Speaking as defender of Islamic holy places, Faisal said such things as "Jews have been accused by God through the Prophets and have no right to Jerusalem." He also declared that "Jews have deviated from the teachings of Moses and attempted to murder Jesus Christ because they did not want the directives of God to be achieved."

Faisal's remarks are usually cruder than those of other Arab leaders and they give the lie to the Arab claim that they are not against Jews but only Zionists. One may argue about the treatment of Jews in Moslem countries over the centuries, but there is certainly no denial that the Arab states have been using anti-Semitism in their war against Israel.

Since Saudi Arabia has oil, Faisal's uncivilized manner has not stopped the leaders of some of the most cultured nations in the world, including Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, from fawning on him. But the time has come especially for Christian clergymen, who have expressed concern about what they consider injustices in the Middle East, to make public denunciations of anti-Semitism emanating from the Arab world.

Sanctions Past Due

by ROBERT E. SEGAL

Still another way to save fuel during the energy emergency would be raising sanctions against nations taking in skyjackers. Think how much precious petrol would stay in the barrel if honorable airline operators and threatened pilots would rise up at last and refuse to haul passengers and freight into capital cities knuckling under today's air pirates!

Those who have followed carefully, but in mounting dismay, the activities of the sky borne brigands now see the rulers of Kuwait temporizing in the cases of the five Arab terrorists who slew 31 innocents in Rome and another in Athens in the December outrages. The Kuwait action in defying Rome's request for extradition of the pirates constitutes one more proof that sky travel will continue hazardous while Arab government officials go on giving the killers of travelers and the snatchers of hostages time to let world opinion cool and forget.

Beholding these acts of law defiance, how can Americans still on the fence wherein the Middle East war potential is concerned go on heaping blame on Israel & misrepresenting the Palestine refugee problem?

A recent round-up by John Sibley of The Times recorded two incidents in 1968, six in 1969, four in 1970, two in 1971, four in 1972, and seven in 1973. Arab terrorists are obviously responsible in most of these escapades. Boasts by the Palestine Liberation Organization usually follow the attacks. And time after time, the perpetrators of the sorties escape punishment.

It is especially disheartening to recall that the International Civil Aviation Organization, meeting in Rome not long before the infamous December murders, there voted to condemn Israel for intercepting an Arab airliner in the tense days before the Yom Kippur War, but failed to speak out against Arabs who skyjack and kill. As a specialized agency of the United Nations, the International Civil Aviation Organization cannot impose sanctions. But even in taking the step it did --- condemning Israel while blinking Arab piracies -- the agency reflected the biases we have come to expect from the UN.

The United States is in excellent position to take the lead in efforts to curb skyjacking. It is now almost a year and a half since any outlaw succeeded in snatching a plane in our country. Through painstaking search of all carry-on luggage, passenger-by-passenger, American sky marshals and their aides have climbed atop the rugged situation and proved to the world that vigilance at the airports--- expensive and time-consuming though it must be--- will pay off. Washington has also given the world an example of what cooperation can accomplish between the U.S. and Cuba (once a safe haven for our domestic hijackers). Having made a pact to prosecute each other's hijackers in their own courts or send them back for prosecution, these two desperate nations have offered a flash of hope to all everywhere angered and threatened by this modern form of banditry.

Terrorists who prey upon innocent travelers and guerrillas who cheer on the terrorists and carry out political assassinations in their own style will all have to be halted and wiped out eventually. If the International Civil Aviation Organization continues to fail us, perhaps the International Federation of Airline Pilots Association will feel obliged to mount and win the battle on their own. The pilots have shown courage and determination on this issue in the past. We should give them support,

"One Man Plus The Truth Constitutes A Majority"

gently fold his tent and quietly steal into the night. But Greenspun appears intent on proving his own guilt in a court of law. He has written column after column, and probably will write more, in an all out attempt to revive the inquisition after it was thrown out of court. His animosity appears limitless.

In order to "get Hughes" Greenspun has thrown caution to the winds in journalistic reporting, and cares not who he lables in blind quest of his fury. For instance:

Greenspun condemns Judge Thompson with faint praise, calling him "able" and "honest" and "sincere" and "a good judge" but questions the characterization of the indictment because it really wasn't that bad.

If you preface the above with a preceding paragraph:

"It has long been apparent that in any matter dealing with Mr. Hughes, the unusual always takes place and this applies to any action on practically every level of government."

And a subsequent paragraph:
".....Some other judge may have found sufficient probable cause to go forward with the trial....."

You have some idea of what Greenspun thinks of Judge Thompson. But Greenspun goes further, much further, with:

"Judges quiver and shake when his name (Hughes) appears on a matter before them. Even the Supreme Court of the State of Nevada has been intimidated, let alone minor judges and half the lawyers in the state."

Greenspun talks of a motion made three and a half years ago before a district judge.... "but still the judge and the Supreme Court drags its feet." He follows with:

"But the judge still sits on the bench and the Supreme Court still acts with all the exalted majesty of the law while the integrity of the entire Nevada judicial system is compromised, if not terribly diminished."

The Sun publisher should be ashamed of himself to defame such honest and stalwart justices like Mowbray and Zenoff, long standing, respected jurists, who have befriended Greenspun on many occasions.

Greenspun then takes after the gaming authorities, who he states: "quake and shiver when the Hughes name is involved and no stops are pulled, including secret meetings, to accomplish His purposes."

Here we have an interesting observation. It was Greenspun, no one else, who caused a secret and private meeting of the Gaming Commission during Gov. Laxalt's regime, to license Maheu for the Hughes gambling casinos, WITHOUT THE PRESENCE OF OWNER HUGHES. It was unprecedented up until that time, but Greenspun put it over. We have a good idea why Greenspun did it, but we'll never know how. Was it threats, coercion, bribes, promises?

Greenspun later was forced to admit under oath that he was working for Hughes, but no salary was ever mentioned. Could it have been the $4,000,000 cash loan at three percent interest (which incidentally no known repayment has been made to date), or the half million in advance for advertising (which Greenspun ignored until Hughes investigators found the item in the books after Maheu was ousted), or the sales of the TV station and golf course at questionably high prices?

But let us get back to Greenspun's tirade against any and all, in his denunciation of Hughes:

"There are few officials in the state who have not been touched by his (Hughes) generosity between, during and after elections and none can act with total independence and volition."

After reading all this we wonder how U.S. Attorney Devoe Heaton must feel, when Greenspun, a named co-conspirator, writes of him:
