the capricious turns of history we have survived and through the strength of our faith we have kept our Jewish heritage intact. Perhaps we survived because, scattered throughout the universe as we were, all of us nevertheless declared ourselves our brother's keepers, cared for each other, helped the needy and the persecuted, and brought many of them to safety.

For sixty years the Joint Distribution Committee has served as the philanthropic arm of the American Jewish community, bringing food to the hungry overseas, healing the sick, educating the children and helping them to live as Jews. This year, as in past years, the JDC has shipped hundreds of tons of Passover supplies and over 10,000 matzo parcels to Jews in Eastern and Western Europe and North Africa to enable them to conduct Sedarim. JDC will continue to help them, especially those trapped in unfriendly countries, until they too can finally realize their dream of freedom.

As we on this side of safety and affluence sit down to our own Sedarim uppermost in our thoughts will be our fellow Jews reciting the same story in hushed tones behind closed doors and shuttered windows. And they, as they relate the story of Passover, will think of us who have helped them, not only with matzot but also with love and hope. We greet them on the eve of Passover and join them in praying for the liberation of all oppressed Jews everywhere.

Rabbi Blank was sharply critical of a resolution adopted by the Islamic countries calling for Arab sovereignty over Jerusalem. He said that the resolution "is a distressing reminder that religion can be a cause of divisiveness and conflict rather than an agency of conciliation and peace."

Citing the religious attachments to Jerusalem of Christians, Muslims and Jews, Rabbi Blank said that this "should make not for conflict and bitterness but for a mutuality of concern." "The millennial Jewish attachment to the City of David, and the deep historic memories it evokes for Jews throughout the world, only engenders for us respectful appreciation of the associations of Muslims and Christians with the Holy City," Rabbi Blank stated.

Blank said in his cable to the Muslim conference that for the religious communities, "the only real issue raised by the universal dimensions of Jerusalem is not the political disposition of the city but the safety of the Holy Places and their unfettered accessibility." He said that "these conditions have in fact existed - for the first time in nearly two thousand years - only since 1967 under Israeli administration."

ground of Middle Eastern discussions taking place in Geneva, arrangements for the administration of the Holy Places, including such measures as extraterritoriality -- which the government of Israel has indicated a willingness to consider -- are proper subjects for a consultation by representatives of Christian, Muslim and Jewish faith communities," Rabbi Blank said.
