RUSSIA ALONE RESPONSIBLE FOR SOVIET JEWS

CLEVELAND, O., -- A prominent American Jewish leader has declared that the response to the problem of Soviet Jewry rests squarely with the Russian government.

Rabbi Israel Miller, chairman of the Conference of Presidents of Major American Jewish Organizations, told delegates attending the Biennial Convention of the National Jewish Welfare Board that the solution to the problem of Soviet Jewry "cannot be found in the U.S., in Israel, in the concern of humanitarians the world over, in the protests of the Jewish community and even in the courageous voice of Soviet Jews demanding their rights. The response to the problem still must come from the Kremlin."

American Jewry's efforts, Rabbi Miller said, must be toward exercising "whatever pressures can be brought to bear upon the Russian decision-makers to ease their policy of restricting emigration. This is the reason for our unswerving support of the Jackson-Vanik Bill in the Congress and of the initiatives of President Nixon and Secretary of State Kissinger in their conversations with the Russian leaders.

"We await a response from the Kremlin -- in acts, not in words. Were the emigration figures to rise and the distribution of the emigrants to include proportionately the Jews of Moscow, Leningrad, Kiev and Odessa, we would know the answer. Were Sylva Zalmanson and the other prisoners of conscience to have their sentences commuted or lightened, we would be cognizant of the difference in attitude.

"We favor improved relationships with the Soviet Union, but de jure is a two-way street and the traffic must be discernible in both directions. No act of the Russians will go unnoticed -- either positively or negatively. We are still awaiting a positive response."

Rabbi Miller, president of the American Zionist Federation, is a national vice-president of JWB.

RUSSIAN ABUSE OF JEWS CONTINUES

LONDON (WNS) --- Alexander Feldman, who is serving a 3 1/2 year sentence at a Soviet labor camp has just been released after 55 days in solitary confinement, according to Jewish sources in the Soviet Union.
