

JEWISH POOR HAVE PROBLEMS IN NYC

NEW YORK (WNS)--Despite the many studies under Jewish auspices showing the problem of the Jewish poor in getting access to government aid, the City of N.Y. does not have enough information to come up with ways to handle the problem, according to Rabbi David Haymovitz, the new director of the office of special projects of the city's Social Service Department. He said he was aware of the problems of elderly Jews living in neglect in deteriorated areas and of those poor Jews living outside the city's 26 designated poverty areas who were neglected in city poverty aid programs for that reason. But Rabbi Haymovitz said additional information is needed for his office to make detailed recommendations to the Human Resources Administration, the city's super-agency which handles welfare and anti-poverty programs.

Rabbi Haymovitz met recently for seven hours with representatives of a wide variety of Jewish organizations, in the first of a series of fact-finding sessions. The meetings was arranged after Sanford Solender, executive vice president of the New York Federation of Jewish Philanthropies, charged that the Jewish poor, particularly Hasidic Jews, were being ignored by anti poverty agencies and were harassed at welfare centers.

PROPER ATTIC VENTILATION SAVES ENERGY

LOWER COOLING COST 25%

On a sunny 95° day, attic temperatures can run 150° or more. A proper ventilator can reduce this temperature to approximately 100°. . . . this is equivalent to 1 ton of cooling—1 ton not required or a saving of about 25% on air-conditioning costs.
