agreement, the Red Cross will start the exchange of Israeli and Syrian POWs with other POWs being exchanged later.

President Nixon, in announcing the agreement in Washington, said it "paves the way for a permanent peace settlement in the entire Middle East area." He said that as a result of the accord, "the prospects of reaching an agreement on a permanent basis are now better than they have ever been over the past 25 years." Nixon praised both Assad and Israeli Premier Golda Meir as well as Kissinger. Mrs. Meir said that Israel hopes "that this is the beginning of a real peace."

Mrs. Meir in presenting the agreement to the Knesset, which approved it by a 76 to 36 vote after a stormy session, stressed repeatedly that it did not prejudice Israel's security and provided fully for the defense of Israeli settlements on the Golan Heights. She noted that the new disengagement line is "for the most part" identical with the line that existed before the Yom Kippur War except that Israel is pulling out of the town of Kuneitra. She hinted at secret protocols and undertakings with regard to the problem of terrorist incursions. She disclosed that the U.S. had informed Israel that it regarded raids by armed groups or individuals across the demarcation line to be contrary to the cease fire and that Israel in its self-defense could act to prevent such raids. Congress is expected to closely question Kissinger on this point. The main points of the agreement outlined by Mrs. Meir are: a mutual commitment to observe the cease-fire; separation of forces by a United buffer zone manned by United Nations forces; a thinning out of forces by both sides in the zones parallel to the buffer zone; Israel will evacuate the Syrian territory captured in the Yom Kippur War; there will be a Syrian civilian administration inside the buffer zone which includes Kuneitra; POWs will be exchanged; the bodies of the dead will be returned and civilian residents of the evacuated Syrian territory will be allowed to return. Mt. Hermon position taken by Israel in the Yom Kippur War will be under UN control. While Mrs. Meir was outlining the program to the Knesset fighting continued on the northern front as Syria shelled Israeli positions.

Likud leader Meachem Beigin accused the government of retreating from its stands against pullbacks and from its demand that a solution to the problem of Syrian Jewry would be worked out in the disengagement agreement.
