

'WHO IS JEW' STILL UP IN AIR

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- The Labor Alignment has decided not to make any decision on the compromise worked out by Ashkenazik Chief Rabbi Shlomo Goren on the Who Is A Jew controversy in order to avoid a split within its ranks.

The decision was made at the suggestion of Premier Yitzhak Rabin at a meeting of the Alignment Knesset faction, the Labor Party Bureau and the Mapam Center after Alignment members voiced their objections to the creation of a committee to negotiate with the National Religious Party on the NRP returning to the coalition government. Mapam leaders demanded that representatives of the Alignment's two present coalition partners, the Independent Liberal Party and the Civil Rights Party, be on the negotiating team. The ILF and CRP had earlier warned that the Goren formula is unacceptable because it perpetuates the Orthodox monopoly in Israel. They warned they would not stay in the coalition unless the Conservative and Reform movements were made partners to the proposed formula on conversion. But the formula was also criticized by members of Mapam as well as by people within the Labor Party.

Meanwhile NRP leader Dr. Yitzhak Raphael said the Alignment decision terminates the unofficial contacts between Labor and NRP over the possibility of the NRP rejoining the government. He said the NRP would from now on act as a clear opposition party.

PLEDGES MORE U.S. SUPPORT IN ISRAEL

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- U. S. Treasury Secretary William Simon, in Israel for economic talks, declared that "I promise you that we will be helpful in every way we can with the help and assistance that has been characteristic of our relationship these past years and which reached its peak during our President's recent visit here."

Simon discussed with Israel the long term aid promised by President Nixon during his visit to Israel.

But he stressed that for Israel stabilizing her economy was more important than receiving American aid.

In a joint communique Simon and Israeli officials announced plans to create a high level committee on which Simon and Israel Finance Minister Yehoshua Rabinowitz would serve to handle economic relations between the United States and Israel. Rabinowitz will come to Washington in Nov.
