ster Aharon Yadlin decided that Israel will end its participation in cultural events directly linked to UNESCO. The committee called on international cultural leaders and other national UNESCO committees to join in the struggle to nullify the anti-Israel resolutions by UNESCO's General Conference. However, the Foreign Minister has stressed that Israel is not contemplating withdrawing its membership or subscription from UNESCO.

But in London, the World Ort Union announced the complete withdrawal of cooperation with UNESCO in which it has consultative status. The International Council of Jewish Social and Welfare Services also notified UNESCO that it was considering its future relations. The International Council is an umbrella organization for the European Council of Jewish Community Services, American Joint Distribution Committee, Central British Fund for Jewish Relief and Rehabilitation, Jewish Colonization Association, United Hias Services and the World Ort Union.

NEW YORK (WNS) -- John Scali, U. S. Ambassador to the United Nations, in a strong speech in the General Assembly warned against what he termed the "tyranny of the majority," the Arab, Afro-Asian and Communist countries, and said that support for the UN in Congress and among U.S. citizens was eroding because of the world body's tendency to adopt "one-sided unrealistic resolutions that cannot be implemented."

Scali's remarks were echoed by several Western nations. The U.S. diplomat said that resolutions were sometimes adopted which represented only a small fraction of the world's people, wealth or territory and sometimes brutally disregarding the sensitivity of the minority. He declared that "there is now a new threat, an arbitrary disregard of United Nations rules, even of its Charter." As examples he cited the deferential treatment accorded the Palestine Liberation Organization and the reverse discrimination against Israel during the debate on the Palestine issue, the anti-Israeli resolutions adopted by UNESCO, and the exclusion of South Africa from the remainder of the Assembly. He noted that the minority in the Assembly "which is so often offended may in fact be a practical majority in terms of its capacity to support this organization and implement its decisions," an obvious reference to the fact that the U.S. and a number of other Western nations pay the bulk of the UN's bills. Israeli Ambassador

Yosef Tekoah praised Scali's remarks, declaring that "By an act of distinct statesmanship, Ambassador Scali has succeeded to unmask the sad truth about the abysmal decline of the United Nations and its demination by the forces inimical to the spirit and purposes of the Charter."

Praise also came from Dr. Judah J. Shapiro, president of the Labor Zionist Alliance, who said that Scali "correctly assessed the growing revulsion in the U.S. to the irresponsible bloc of Arab, Communist and Afro-Asian nations." He added that Scali's "position is clear indication of America's support of Israel against the artificial majority which has been mobilized against the Jewish State."
