

SEN. CANNON DEMANDS N. HAMP. RESOLUTION

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- Nevada Senator Howard Cannon demanded a "here and now" resolution of the New Hampshire election dispute.

In a terse Senate floor speech, the chairman of the Senate Rules Committee told his colleagues "somebody, John Durkin or Louis Wyman, won the Senate election of last November 5 and the U.S. Senate has a constitutional obligation to find out who that winner is."

"While we sit here in deliberation over what some around the country have come to see as the purely partisan question of whether a Republican or Democratic candidate shall have this seat," Cannon said, "the great problems facing this nation continue to grow. So does the backup of legislation designed to meet those critical problems."

And citing the growing impatience of more and more Americans to settle the Durkin - Wyman issue and get on with the business of government, Cannon said, "Let us, for the sake of the nation, resolve our differences and get on with it."

Long debate on the question has resulted in the Senate voting of cloture five times on this issue, more often than ever before on any single issue in any one session.

"People all over this country," Cannon later pointed out, "are beginning to forget what's at stake here, a fundamental Constitutional issue, in their impatience to have it settled and get on with the business of government in the midst of adpression when all our problems are more critical than they've been since 1932."

"The fact is," he said, "that just because an election is close, it can't be invalidated by the Senate. That would in effect be a disenfranchisement of the voters of New Hampshire. Under the Constitution, the Senate is obliged to settle this question, and we have got to settle it now."

How to read your own Electric Meter (And why you should)

The electric meter on your home measures the amount of electricity you use. Your power company reads your meter each month and translates usage into dollars and cents by subtracting the previous month's reading from the current month's. It's not difficult to read your own meter. Here's how:

Your meter has either four or five dials. Start at the one on the left and then read each of them from left to right.

The correct reading is indicated by the pointer on each dial. Always select the lower of the two numbers as the reading when the pointer is between numbers. (Except where the pointer is between 9 and 0. In this case, read it as 9.)

That's all there is to it. Here's an example, where the correct reading is 79484:

Get in the habit

In addition to having a check on our meter reading accuracy, you can make this practice pay off in your efforts to keep your power bill down. By frequent readings (daily or weekly) you'll be able to see the immediate results of your energy-savings measures. You can use these readings to involve the whole family in your conservation effort. Many of our customers have been doing this for some time and they've told us that frequent meter readings is the best step they've taken to help lower power use.

If you want more information on how to keep your power bills down, write for our new booklet on the subject. Address: "Booklet," Nevada Power Company, Box 230, Las Vegas 89151. Or, you may pick one up at any of our offices. Or, call 385-5811 and we'll be pleased to send you a copy.

If you'd like to get a group of friends and neighbors together (perhaps a civic or social organization you belong to), we'll be glad to have one of our energy conservation specialists address the gathering and answer any questions you may have. Drop us a note, or call 385-5753.

Meanwhile, please make conservation a habit. Electricity costs too much to waste any longer.
