stance, that any five rolls of the dice will not repeat, right or wrong, in the same order the next five rolls. So if you make a note of the first series, you bet opposite the second time around, doubling up five times. You should catch one winner -- mostly.

In 21, if the dealer has an eight showing and you have two nines, split them. You're looking for 19 against the dealer's probably 18. If the dealer has six or less showing, split any pair hoping the dealer will go over and you win both bets.

The best bet on the big-six wheel is the two. While we do not recommend the game, a three dollar bet on the one, plus a two dollar bet on the two, could keep you even, if you win five out of six spins.

PLO at Crime Conference

It is ludicrous that the Canadian government should be pondering on whether to admit representatives of the Palestine Liberation Organization into Canada to attend a United Nations conference on crime in Toronto this September. All Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau's government has to do is follow Canadian law which bars entry to members of terrorist organizations.

Although the Canadian government may have already made its decision, it has not been announced because of the heavy opposition to allowing the PLO into Canada. The issue has become a political football with the opposition Conservatives calling for the PLO to be barred while Trudeau blames the opposition Conservative provincial government in Ontario for having arranged the conference in its capitol, Toronto.

However, politics aside, opposition to admitting the PLO comes not only from the Conservatives but from the entire Canadian Jewish community, leading members of Trudeau's own Liberal Party and many of Canada's major English and French language newspapers.

The real blame lies with the UN itself which has given the PLO observer status. How can anyone explain the presence of the PLO at a conference on crime unless because the conferees wanted their expertise as one of the leading perpetrators of murder and destruction on an international scale.

Regardless of the UN's foibles, Canada has the responsibility of upholding certain standards of decency and morality. To admit the PLO to a crime conference would be a crime in itself.

pendent, our landsman, Henry Kissinger, may well have played and is playing a vital 'behind-the-scenes' role -- even quite possible also in connection with the latest 'threatening' albeit vague letter Cairo had sent to Secretary-General Waldheim declaring its refusal to accept any renewed mandate for UNEF's presence in the Sinai -- unless.

"Unless," of course, can be interpreted as meaning only one thing: unless the U.S. and the UN prod Israel into bending to the Arab bid.

Now it is difficult to conceive that President Sadat and his Foreign Minister Fahmy, on their own, would have been so bold as to challenge the UN on the issue of UNEF without having received some hint from Mr. K, who had previously blamed Israel for the breakdown on his earlier efforts to bring about a next-step agreement on the Sinai.

Mr. Kissinger, of course, publicly criticized the Egyptian move. At the same time, however, he expressed the belief -- and his words betray a hidden meaning -- "that there is still a possibility of making an agreement if everybody -- Israel -- keeps in mind that the consequences of a breakdown of negotiations will transcend in significance any of the difficulties that will be produced by the negotiations."

Recognizing that he -- and the Ford Administration -- cannot afford to meet with another failure, he added: "The U.S. has an interest in the progress in the negotiations in the Middle East and was making every effort to promote progress. Ultimately," he stressed, "progress depends on the willingness of all the parties -- primarily Israel -- to be conciliatory and to make a move that are necessary..."

In his recent meetings with Sadat and Fahmy, Mr. Kissinger undoubtedly took up every aspect of what may constitute a next step in the Sinai and, in this context, they must have discussed Israel's adamant stand as Premier Rabin had conveyed it to Mr. Kissinger -- a stand unacceptable to Egypt. "What to do? How can we get Israel to change its stand?" they must have queried. It was at this juncture, possibly, that the issue of UNEF came up. Egypt would use the threat of refusing to renew its mandate as a pressure against Israel and at the same time compel the Security Council to formulate a new and much stronger resolution to enforce this pressure.

And the United States under Henry Kissinger's guidance, it now appears, is becoming a party in this campaign to dwarf the Jewish State.

Viewing the current complex situation, the Wall Street Journal, in a leading editorial, made the following significant observation:

"In the last analysis, the U.S., and only the U.S., can make Israel accept Arab terms against Jerusalem's better judgment. But the ironies of the situation are such that the more the U.S. exerts this kind of pressure, the more damage we are likely to do to our own interests, all our interests, in the Middle East."

The editorial goes on to point out that "there are very few Arabs who would not be deeply relieved if the Zionist state were dismantled and its Jewish inhabitants sent to live elsewhere.

What is there to tell you about slot machines? Anything can happen on any pull. It happens to be our favorite game -- mostly because it keeps us away from risking important money. We prefer a single coin machine, jackpots only, with a possibility of a payoff of 2,000 to one. We also prefer a machine that has been hitting over one that is expected to pay off any minute -- Our favorite spot is the El Cortez, where the food is excellent and the management most cordial. There, one progressive machine is up to $64,000 pay-off, which may be hit with 4 sevens on a 3-quarter play. Don't hold your breath.

While Keno is a once-in-a-lifetime possibility to most, including us, we do know some who claim they make a living at it. Honest. He plays a 95 cent five spot (special) which pays off $1,000. Claims he hits one every two or three weeks at an investment of $500 or less. Calls for patience, and stamina and plenty of heart, but sounds plausible.

Bingo, the most aggravating of all pastimes, calls for plenty of hope and a little prayer wouldn't hurt. Good luck.

If you sit down at the Bacarrat table, make believe you know all about it, even if you don't. Put your money on the Bank or Player and wait for the dealer to take it or pay you off. If you play the bank, and win, remember you owe the house vigorish.

Chuckaluck, that's the bird cage, is for the birds. You'd be better off playing gin with a card cheat.

Poker or Pan in the card rooms, for anything over a dollar limit, will bring you up against solid rocks, whose only risk is the ante. They'll see a card if they have the table beat going in. That means if the high card showing is a queen, the rock must have at least a king in the hole to see the first bet.

There you have it Mr. and Mrs. Tourist. Wager if you must, but save a little so you don't go home bust.

It has been said that about 60% of all gamblers, who know what they are doing, are on the win side at one time or another. The trick is to stay with the plus, before you take the bus. Don't be a silly Millie (House Joke), knock off with the first big payoff.

If you are a winner, make the most of it. Enjoy what we have to offer in Las Vegas, the tremendous shows, the outstanding food and every personalized sport imaginable.

If you are a loser, within bounds, ease the pain by taking in some of the attractions the winners are really enjoying. Don't try to make people think you enjoy losing. If you do, see a psychiatrist.

That's real TSURISS.

UNITED NATIONS (WUP) -- Judging by the escalating anti-Israeli developments during the past two weeks, it appears quite clear now that in the international political Middle East 'chess game' a sinister move is in process to 'checkmate' Israel into a dead end and compel Jerusalem to accede to Arab terms without receiving anything basic in return for its security.

Anything that makes this hope seem feasible will make the Middle East more dangerous. American - induced 'progress' that leads to a major weakening, real or illusory, in Israel's ability to defend itself will contribute more to a new war than the 'stagnation and stalemate' President Ford says he fears.

It thus appears clear -- when all the pieces of the Mideast 'puzzle' are put together -- that the finger of President Sadat's 'brother' has had very much to do with all these latest developments aimed at compelling Israel to accept terms detrimental to her security.
