

ISRAEL INITIALS, EGYPT SIGNS AGREEMENT

GENEVA (WNS) -- The protocols implementing the Sinai disengagement agreement were completed here with Egypt signing them and Israel only initialing them. Moredechai Gazit, chief of the Israeli delegation, said Israel was initialing the documents for "authentication." He said they will be signed in full once the U.S. Congress approves sending American technicians to monitor electronic warning stations in the Sinai.

The protocols signed in Geneva call for the implementation of the agreement to begin with Egypt moving its first group of technicians into the Abu Rodeis oilfields on the Gulf of Suez on October 5, according to sources in Jerusalem. It will end with the final redeployment in the Mitle and Gidi Passes February 22. The area between the Gulf of Suez coastal strip and the Mediterranean to the north has been divided into six sectors, from which Israel will withdraw in staggered intervals.

A Joint (Israeli-Egyptian) Commission will meet at regular intervals under Gen. Ensio Siilasvuo, commander of the United Nations troops in the Mideast, and will discuss problems "in order to reach agreement."

This means Israel and Egypt must reach an agreement and cannot ask the UN chairman for a deciding vote as was in the case despite "important differences" between the U.S. and the Soviet Union "our two countries have held parallel views that the situation in the Middle East poses grave dangers and that partial steps must be part of and contribute to progress toward a comprehensive settlement." He said discussions have begun with the Soviet Union toward that end. Kissinger said the role of the UN is essential in the Mideast noting that UN troops have become indispensable to the disengagement agreements in the Sinai and the Golan Heights.

He stressed that a just and durable peace in the Mideast requires meeting the concerns and interests of all countries in the area, including their territorial integrity, their right to live in peace and security and the legitimate interest of the Palestinians.

Kissinger's speech drew a favorable reaction from Israeli Ambassador Chaim Herzog. He told a gathering of Jewish leaders that he was pleased with the "strong measure of American leadership" enunciated in the address and hopes the American representatives at the UN would maintain this "new look."

Soviet Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko, in his Assembly address was moderate in tone and he criticized but did not attack either the U.S. or Israel.

Gromyko said the Soviet Union wants the Geneva conference reconvened with the participation of all parties concerned, including the PLO. He declared that "to establish a just and lasting peace in the Middle East in the interest of all states of the area and people inhabiting it, it is necessary to withdraw Israeli forces from all Arab territories occupied by them in 1967" to insure the legitimate rights of the Arab people of Palestine, including their right to establish their own state; and to guarantee the rights of all countries of the Middle East of the pre-1967 Mixed Armistice Commission. This was one of the points insisted upon by Israel.

to independent development.

Although he did not mention the Sinai accord, he implied criticism of the pact when he said that "the problem of the Middle East be free from an approach based on momentary considerations and publicity" since a solution required "the security and independence of all the countries of the region."

Gromyko's criticism of Israel was mild compared to previous Soviet blasts.

British Foreign Minister James Callaghan in his address also said the Palestinian problem was the chief issue in the Mideast. He called for an interim agreement between Israel and Syria on the Golan Heights to prove that the Sinai accord "was not an end to itself but part of a continuous process leading to a comprehensive settlement." A similar view was expressed by Japanese Foreign Minister Kichii Miyazawa who also stressed that the Arab-Israeli conflict must be solved by negotiations.

Iraqi Foreign Minister Saadoon Hammadi was the first at the Assembly session to demand Israel's ouster. He said the expulsion of Israel was the only way the international community could rectify the Assembly "error" in 1947 when it voted to partition Palestine.
