

JEWISH LIFE FLOURISHING IN RUMANIA

NEW YORK (WUP) -- Rabbi Israel Miller, President of the Conference of Presidents Rumania, has hailed Rumania as a nation where its Jewish community -- the "third largest in the world" (he did not consider the Jews of the USSR as being a active and coherent community under the present circumstances) -- flourishes and "lives Jewishly without any fear."

Enthusiastic and full of praise of what he found during his recent visit in the only Communist country which has retained its diplomatic relations with Israel, Rabbi Miller recounted his experiences at a press luncheon here in New York last week.

"I returned from my visit to Bucharest and other cities in Rumania deeply impressed by the active Jewish organizational life in that country," he declared, "not only in terms of synagogue attendance but also as expressed in Jewish theatre, kosher restaurants, children's choirs and welfare institutions."

The noted Jewish leader further noted that it was apparent to him "that Jewish emigration from Rumania was proceeding at a good pace."

He made it a special point to note that "the flourishing Jewish life in Rumania ... is an object lesson for the Soviet Union, demonstrating that there is no inherent contradiction between a socialist government, a flourishing Jewish community and aliyah."

Wherever he went, in little villages as well as in the big cities -- there are some 70 Jewish communities throughout Rumania -- he found active synagogues and Jewish community centers attended by both the young and the old. In Jassi, he said, he took part in an inspiring service in a 30-year-old house of worship. In another smaller village he found a typical old European-type Beth Hamedrash where the spirit of the congregants brought to mind a scene from 'Fiddler On The Roof.'

NEW YORK (WNS) -- Former Premier Golda Meir declared that the "one answer" that the Arabs will understand and what would be a response to the anti-Zionist votes in the United States, is aliyah.

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- Transportation Minister Gad Yaacobi is seeking young Jewish volunteers from the diaspora to help build the long-awaited railroad linking Eilat to central Israel.

NEW YORK (WNS) -- The Zionist movement must mobilize the American Jewish community in order to make it "more democratic and truly responsive to its people," Dr. Allen Pollack, a member of the World Zionist Organization Executive, told an ideological symposium during the Labor Zionist Allians's 23rd national convention.
