

RABIN ENCOURAGED

demonstrated that the Arab world does not tolerate autonomy for any minority which does not have an independent state and the capability to defend itself. He assailed the silence of the world at the "immoral events" in Lebanon where 10,000 people were killed in ten months of fighting. He said the events in Lebanon made him "proud to be a Jew" because wherever and whenever a Jew is victimized his brothers elsewhere come to his aid.

In an appearance on NBC-TV's "Meet the Press" Rabin said Israel has two options -- reconvening the Geneva conference or "quiet diplomacy" to test the intentions of the Arabs. During his television appearance Rabin got into a dramatic exchange with syndicated columnist Rowland Evans, an arch critic of Israel. Evans challenged Rabin over Israel's air raids on terrorist bases in Palestinian refugee camps in Lebanon and the Premier's contention that the core of the Arab-Israeli conflict is the refusal of the Arab states to recognize Israel. When Evans asked "by what right" did Israel use American arms to attack the Palestinian camps in Lebanon, Rabin replied "by the rule of self defense." He said, "We attacked bases that carried out all kinds of atrocities against Israel." Evans later said that Assistant Secretary of State for Near Eastern Affairs Harold Saunders had testified that the Palestinian issue is the heart of the Arab-Israeli conflict, "I don't accept Saunders' concept," Rabin replied, "and there are people in the Administration who know better than he." Rabin said he had no evidence that Saunders' views were shared by Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger.

Meanwhile, Rabin faces a political storm when he returns to Jerusalem over a remark allegedly made in Washington by a "senior source in the Premier's party" who criticized the shopping list that was drawn up by the Ministry of Defense. The Israeli news media has seized on the remark as signs of a widening rift between Rabin and Defense Minister Shimon Peres. Peres has not commented but Defense Ministry sources have noted the Israel's weapon purchase list was approved by Rabin who as a former Chief of Staff cannot claim ignorance of details and meaning. Likud MK Shmuel Tamir has already submitted a sharp question on the issue for the Premier in the Knesset.

RABIN WINDS UP TOUGH AMERICAN TOUR

NEW YORK (WNS) -- Israeli Premier Yitzhak Rabin wound up his American visit with a meeting with Israeli journalists and a television appearance here after a tough cross-country speaking tour. Rabin spoke in New York, Chicago and Los Angeles emphasizing that he was satisfied with his meetings in Washington with President Ford, Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger and others.

Speaking to some 500 Jewish and Non-Jewish community leaders, businessmen and clergymen in New York, Rabin stressed that the responsibility for reaching peace in the Middle East is that of the parties involved. "It will be a mistake on the part of Israel as well as the Arabs, to look up to the big powers for a solution," he said. In Chicago at a dinner given by Mayor Richard J. Daley attended by 700 persons, Rabin described how "Seventy years ago, a poor young refugee ran away from Russia" and came to Chicago "where he was allowed to get an education...and learned the meaning of freedom and democracy and the rights of individuals." Rabin said the refugee, who was his father, later joined the Jewish Legion of the British Army in World War I and came to Palestine.

Earlier Rabin told a rally of 3000 Chicago Jewish leaders that peace will come to the Middle East only when their Arab leaders "change their policy of ignoring our right to exist." He then went to Los Angeles where he was feted by 100 members of the entertainment industry at a dinner attended by Kissinger. He also spoke to 1700 persons at a dinner inaugurating the United Jewish Welfare Fund drive at which $8.2 million was raised. Rabin told some 2000 Jewish young people at a meeting arranged by the Los Angeles Jewish Youth Council that Israel is "strong in terms of what we present and what we project."
