weaponry.

The scope of his foresight knew no bounds and his perception accepted no barriers. The areas he covered ranged from undersea to outer space. He knew and sanctioned every detail of sophisticated equipment invented, discovered or created by the scientists he employed, from infra-red sensors to electro-optical systems.

The marvel of Howard Hughes was his driving determination that never slowed or ceased, to provide the best know-how for improvement and perfection. His efforts played a large part in keeping America's military second to none and U.S. citizenry more comfortable and safe than anywhere else in the world.

As recent as 1968 the world's largest communications satellites were launched after being turned out at a Hughes plant. They were capable of carrying more than 5,000 two-way telephone calls and 12 color TV broadcasts—simultaneously. Two weeks later he produced a multi-plexed passenger entertainment and service system, described by experts as one of the most significant extensions of space age technology for commercial aircraft.

The Hughes 3-D radar was introduced as the only system for a restricted frontier area with the speed necessary to react. Then came an all-electronic memory device to speed, simplify and make most efficient computer information; a laser rangefinder for U.S. Army's Sheridan tanks which fired a light beam at 136,000 miles per second for computing range to score a direct hit on the first round; a radar system electronic extension of a fighter pilot's visual and mental facilities for F-15 superior fighter; AWG-9 airborne weapons control system for Navy's F-14 planes; a polymeric coating for electrical wiring that insulates from excessive heat; an Army tank-killer to penetrate enemy armor more than a mile away; and an Earth Resources Technology Satellite to measure and manage the natural resources upon which mankind depends for existence.

Howard Hughes was a man devoid of ego. Praise flustered him. He had no time for reflection. He was geared to go forward, to ameliorate the human race. He was truly a great American.

In his role as genius, visionary, inventor, mechanical wizard, humanitarian, movie maker, and patriot, his mission was accomplished.

It was a job well done.

Lincoln in Israel

By Rabbi Samuel Silver

It is time to salute Leo Gildesgame.

One of the leading philanthropists of our nation, Mr. Gildesgame is a former yeshiva bachur and veteran of the battlefields of Israel where he fought with Trumpeldor's Legion. He is an honored resident of Mt. Kisco, N.Y.

Mr. Gildesgame's career is full of glorious services to the causes of humanitarianism, Hebrew scholarship and religion. He is a leader in a cluster of national organizations.

This year he did something which will forever be remembered.

He funded the transfer of an eight-foot statue of Lincoln from Chicago to Ramat Gan. That statue, elaborately dedicated a few Sundays ago in the presence of dignitaries of the State of Israel and the U.S. Government, will be the equivalent of the Statue of Liberty in this nation.

Just as the Status of Liberty was given to us by France as a sign of its kinship so will the Gildesgame - arranged statue of Lincoln stand as a bond between the two democracies of the U.S. and Israel.

So appealing Mr. Gildesgame's offer to give the statue to the U.S. so that our nation could, in turn, give it to Israel on the occasion of our Bicentennial, that both houses of Congress unanimously endorsed the idea and President Ford enthusiastically signed the bill authorizing the transfer. It may be the only thing which our entire Senate and House of Representatives have agreed upon lately.

Modest but imaginative, Mr. Gildesgame has not only honored history but has made it. His life - partner, the former Ruth Oppenheim, deserves kudos, too, for supporting this project, as well as many others.

Lincoln is indeed a link between our two republics. We gladly salute Mr. Gildesgame for a superb way of dramatizing that link.

Paher, 2021 Edgewood Avenue, has resided in the district he seeks to represent more than 25 years. He attended local schools, graduating from Las Vegas High School in 1958. He received his Masters Degree in Political Science from the University of Nevada in 1969.

He is best known for his books on Nevada history, which have sold well throughout the state. Paher captured his party's nomination for Secretary of State in 1974, but was defeated in the runoff by William Swackhamer.

"I've always been interested in state government," Paher said, "and I want to pursue legislation that protects people who produce whether they be in labor or in

DINITZ URGES PATIENCE FOR MIDEAST PEACE

BOSTON (WNS) -- The world must not grow impatient with the slow progress toward peace in the Middle East, Simcha Dinitz, Israel's Ambassador to the United States, told the 78th annual meeting of the National Conference of Jewish Communal Service here.

"Shortcuts are dangerous in politics, just as in traffic," Dinitz asserted. "Israel must build a nation while protecting a state," Dinitz said, "and if we grow impatient, peace and security are endangered."

The Israeli envoy said the main obstacle to peace is the historic rejection of the Islamic world of any non-Islamic community in its midst and demonstrated by the strife in Lebanon. Since the Arabs are not prepared for peace, "the Arab-Israeli dispute cannot be settled by instant solution, and wishing it does not create a new reality."
