WASHINGTON (JTA) -- Sen. Richard Schweiker of Pennsylvania, selected by Ronald Reagan to be his running mate if he wins the Republican nomination for the Presidency, is easily one of the strongest supporters of Congressional legislation in support of Israel's requirements and Soviet Jewry.

Frequently honored by Jewish organizations for his activities on liberal causes and issues affecting the Jewish community during his 16 years in the House and Senate, Schweiker has been outspoken in insisting on economic and military assistance for Israel and in providing teeth in laws to help the emigration of Jews and others from the Soviet Union.

The 50-year-old Schweiker, who was reelected two years ago to his second Senate term, was one of 34 Senators who last month opposed the retention of Air Force General George S. Brown as chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

The Voter's Guide

They are calling 1976 the year of the voter, and that is no understatement.

The person who casts a ballot these days is no longer disgruntled, disgusted or disillusioned with politics or the party machine. The "so what" frustrations of the past are on the way out. As certain as Watergate will defeat Gerald Ford, if nominated, the public is coming to the realization that it is the voter who puts a man into office, who is the ultimate master and the one who calls the shots, not only before but after the election.

The sooner all aspiring candidates understand and comply with the modern trend of political office seeking, the better chance for victory they will have in this and forthcoming elections. Some of the hopefuls who filed in the current campaign have an inkling of what's in the wind. One offered a partnership with the voters, another seeks advice from the electorate. Each is a step in the right direction, but, unfortunately not far enough.

That is why, when the opportunity presented itself, with our long-time popular assemblyman deciding to run for the senate, we complied with urgings from neighbors and friends to poke our nose into the Assembly, 5th District race. This writer seeks election to prove to one and all the workable merits of a new concept in political office seeking.

We venture to manifest a VOTER'S GUIDE, in which the voter is boss and the person elected is a salaried, hired hand. The office holder of the future will be taking orders from the persons who pay his wages. He will not assume the role of a condescending leader accepting advice on actions he may choose. The popularity contest and articulate speaker are items of the past. Loyalty to the voter is the only determining factor to secure the post. A candidate who wants the job will have to toe the line for the boss.

This new policy can be put into practice by the simple process of polling the registered voters. The more controversial issues will be determined in advance. The majority will rule and its voice will be the aye or nay vote cast in the State Assembly. Other matters, as they arise, if necessary, will be presented to the electorate in time for those interested to air their views. Whatever else, about which the 5th District would have no interest, would be a matter of priority.

The only remaining factor of concern is

ISRAELIS, LEBANESE MOSLEMS, MEET

TEL AVIV (WNS) -- Israeli officers have been meeting with officers of the Arab Lebanese Army, the Moslem group that has been fighting together with the Palestine Liberation Army against Lebanese Christians, it was revealed here.

Sources in Jerusalem said the talks, held at Rosh Hanikra on the Israeli-Lebanese border, were requested by the Arab-Lebanese Army and arranged through the United Nations representatives in the area. The two sides discussed problems concerning the border, including the crossing into Israel of villagers from southern Lebanon for medical aid, trade and employment.

The Arab Lebanese Army is made up of Moslem soldiers, led by Lt. Ahmed El Khatib, who broke away from the regular Lebanese armed forces which is headed by a Christian general. Some Jerusalem sources say that the meetings now going on are the result of a common desire by Israel and the Arab Lebanese Army to keep Syria out of southern Lebanon.
