

FORD, CARTER PLEDGE

rights, accused the Ford Administration of having failed to make "serious efforts to get the Russians to permit greater numbers of people to emigrate freely to the countries of their choice." But Ford told the B'nai B'rith convention that he was working with Soviet Communist Party Secretary Leonid I. Brezhnev and key members of Congress to restore Soviet Jewish emigration to its previous level.

At a special convention session devoted to Soviet Jewry Eugene Gold, chairman of the National Conference on Soviet Jewry, criticized both Ford and Carter for advocating quiet diplomacy as a means to alleviate the struggle of Soviet Jewry. He said public diplomacy was needed also such as the Helsinki agreement and the Jackson - Vanik amendment. "Quiet diplomacy alone never helped a Soviet Jew," he said.

Ford, in his address, also pledged anew his support for a "strong Israel" and said he was supporting "international action to stamp out terrorism wherever it occurs." He promised U.S. support for Israel against "attempts to deny Israel her full rights of membership in the United Nations." Ford declared that he intends to pursue the "negotiating process" in the Middle East. "I do not promise you it will be easy," the President said, adding there will be "no imposed solutions -- but agreements whose terms are hammered out between the parties, as in the Sinai agreement." Ford also pledged there will be "no one-sided concessions." Declaring that he was "proud to stand on my consistent 28 - year record of support for Israel," Ford said the U.S. "will stand firm in its commitment to Israel's security and survival."

Secretary of State Henry A. Kissinger, in an unscheduled speech to the convention, said "there is no disagreement in our purposes and those of Israel" in "the main direction of our policy" both on goals and tactics. The friendship of the U.S. and Israel "has always been a touchstone of the validity of our foreign policy in general," he said. As did Ford, Kissinger said "I will not pretend to you that the future will be easy." But he noted, "I do say that the prospects for negotiating toward peace in the Middle East seems to me never to have been better."

STEIGER DEFEATS ANTI-SEMITISM

WASH. (WNS) -- Rep. Sam Steiger has won the Republican nomination for the U.S. Senate in the hotly contested Arizona Republican Primary. Steiger defeated Rep. John Conlan after a campaign which included overtones of anti-Semitism against Steiger, a Jew.

Sen. Barry Goldwater, the elder statesman of the Arizona Republican Party endorsed Steiger over his equally Conservative opponent because of "my deep concern over the injection of religion in this struggle."

Steiger now faces Dennis Deconcini, a

Phoenix attorney, who is the Democratic candidate.

FOUR PROJECTS MEMORIALIZE SAPIR

JERUSALEM (WNS)

-- Four major projects will honor Pinhas Sapir, the former Israeli Finance Minister and chairman of the World Zionist Organization and Jewish Agency Executives who died August 1975.

A settlement region in the Arava as well as the region's chief town will be named for Sapir; the liberal arts and science center at the Ben Gurion University of the Negev will carry his name; a scholarship fund will be named for him, and the building complex at Kfar Saba, the town where he lived for 40 years, will include a cultural center, libraries, a concert hall, theater, a youth center and the Sapir Museum.
