James Earl "Jimmy" Carter -- who won more primaries with fewer Jewish votes than any other Democrat seeking the presidential nomination -- believes he can attract enough Jewish backing on Election Day, November 2, to restore the tradition of overwhelming Jewish support for the Democratic candidate that began with Franklin D. Roosevelt in 1932. Gov. Carter was candid about reports of some "uncertainty" among voters of the Jewish faith in an exclusive interview in his Plains, Georgia home this week.

In a close election, Jewish voters could prove decisive, concentrated in the states with the largest number of electoral votes: California; New York, Pennsylvania, Illinois, Ohio, Michi-gan, Massachusetts, Maryland, New Jersey, Florida, (Texas is the only state in the national top 10 that doesn't also rank among the top 10 in terms of Jewish population.)

And where little more than half of all eligi-ble voters managed to get to the polls four years ago, an estimated 80 per cent of Jews did vote. A shift in the habitual Jewish voting behavior, such as took place in 1972, could throw some

"Mommy, what's a Yom Kippur?" the curious youngster asked, as he crawled up on her knee.

Cradling her precious child in her arms, she reflected before answering. A Solomon she wasn't, but the young Jewish parent, with true mother's instinct, knew how to communicate with her offspring. She had handled, where do babies come from? and who made the world? Now it was the Uigh Helidows was the High Holidays.

"First of all," she explained, "we have the Jewish New Year."

"Is that the time you and daddy come home with funny paper hats and wake me in the middle of the night with tin horns?"

"No, doll, that is the English New Year. The Jewish New Year is Rosh Hashanah, which we Jewish New Year is Rosh Hashanah, which we celebrate like the beginning of the world." "But what about Yom Kippur?" I'm coming to that. Since Rosh Hashanah is the start of a whole new year it is proper and fitting that we do not carry any bad habits over from the year that just passed. We must begin a fresh, new life."

"I promise to be good, Mommy." "I know you will, dear, but that is not enough. You have to be sorry for the bad actions of last year." "You mean like the time I was too busy playing and forgot to kiss grandpa when he came to visit?"

"That was one and then remember how often I had to remind you to put your toys away in your room and when you eat candy to spoil your appetite for dinner?" "That's enough. After all I'm older now and I know better."

'Yes, honey," the mother responded, "That is why we have ten days of repentance, which means we think things over, until Yom Kippur, the Day of Atonement.

"What does atonement mean?" "Atonement is to be really and truly sorry for your sins, that you will correct them and never, never commit any again." "I'm going to be very, very good mommy." "Just saying it is not enough. You have to mean it from the bottom of your heart. You see God is listening and paying close attention not only to what you are saying but also what you are thinking. And God knows if you are sincere." "If He believes you, your name is entered into the Book of Life for a healthy and happy new
