SAHARA HOTEL ADDS GORMET SPANISH FOOD

VILLA LEVANTE

In the whole United States there are perhaps a half dozen authentic gourmet Spanish restaurants -- and now there is one in Las Vegas, Villa Levante, the newest addition to the fine dining rooms at Del Webb's Hotel Sahara.

The name Villa Levante is a reference to the famous east coast of Spain, known as the Levante, "where the sun rises." The kitchen of Spain give the Levante another, more meaningful title, "the land of rice." Rice grows in abundance on Spain's east coast and is the basis of many Spanish dishes, including the most famous - Paella. The Sahara's Villa Levante is an intimate room with exquisite appointments and special areas designed for privacy. The atmosphere created by the dim lights, rich woods and carved wrought iron is a perfect setting for the culinary delights on the extensive menu.

The wine list offers a selection of domestic and imported champagne and red, white and rose dinner beverages. Appetizers include succulent crab, oysters, snails, shrimp, lobster, scampi and clam dishes. Authentic Spanish soups and salads whet one's appetite for the upcoming entree.

Besides the aforementioned Paella, Villa Levante features a tantalizing array of dishes, prepared with the master touch of the head chef, imported from his native Spain. Freshly cooked vegetables and a choice of rich desserts complete this gourmand's delight.

"It's a restaurant that Las Vegas has needed for a long time," comments Villa Levante maitre d' John Thomas. "Our outstanding menu, along with a staff of well-trained captains and waiters, is our salute to Spain."

Villa Levante is open for dinner at 6 o'clock each evening and reservations are required.
