CARTER IN JERUSALEM

CAIRO (WNS) -- President Carter received a tumultuous welcome as he arrived in Cairo March 8 in his effort to help Israel and Egypt achieve a peace treaty.

Israeli Premier Menachem Begin who returned to Tel Aviv from the United States a few hours later, said a peace treaty was within reach if Egyptian President Anwar Sadat accepted the proposals Carter made March 4 and which were accepted by Israel. But he said if Egypt makes demands for changes that "represent an erosion in the U.S. proposals we shall have to reject them." Begin said he had sent Carter a cable in Cairo wishing him success because "the American leader's success will also be ours."

In prepared statements after Carter and Sadat made the 15 - kilometer trip from the airport to the Qubba Palace in Cairo, both leaders mentioned the need to include the Palestinians in a Middle East peace. In "a just and comprehensive peace, our Palestinian brothers must realize their national rights and regain their freedom," Sadat said. Carter noted that while riding in the car with Sadat, he and the Egyptian leader "repledged ourselves not to disappoint those here, in Israel, among the Palestinians, among the countries also presently in a state of war who depend upon us and others to bring the long unrealized but deeply desired state of peace to this region..." Carter stressed that he had come to the Middle East to bring peace to Egypt and Israel which he said would be a "beginning" that would bring us much closer to the broader goal we seek, a real peace, a comprehensive peace, a peace that would reflect the legitimate needs of all those who have suffered so deeply during the last 30 years of conflict, enmity and war." Carter declared that "I pray that with God's help, we may remove the remaining obstacles to the conclusion of a peace treaty between Egypt

"One Man Plus The Truth Constitutes A Majority"

BY JACK TEIL

Let's Review List

One man is Governor of the State of Nevada, Robert E. List.

Like it or not, he was overwhelmingly elected, despite a bitter political primary struggle involving a controversial story with a gambler, complimentary gifts from a casino, and other infractions. You would think it would end there and then. But the media in Northern Nevada, List's strongest foothold, demanded further explanation in more detailed accounting. So List complained on TV that he was being "singled out" over continuous grievances. His "cop out" may have ended this nonsense -- we hope -- so that he can get down to the business of being Governor -- to which he was elected.

In his campaign for Governor, List promised many issues of importance to the voter. High on the list was law and order, strong gambling enforcement, lower taxes, and mainly a continuation of Gov. Mike O'Callaghan's four year tenure of integrity and honesty. Bob List is an honest man.

We will expect him to carry out his promises and wind up a most popular governor during his four year term.

As far as law and order, List will give us the strongest state enforcement possible which is bound to bring about improvement and satisfaction to the electorate. When it comes to controlling the gambling in the State of Nevada there is no one more properly equipped than Bob List. Here again we have protection of the utmost. He knows gambling, he knows gamblers, and he knows all the pros and cons.

As for taxes, List will go as far as the governor can in that direction. All the rest is integrity and honesty and List has all of that.

Of course during the next four years there will be hundreds of laws passed, some of which will be signed, others vetoed. You cannot please all the people all the time but again I urge you to listen to us that List will do the best he can.

He is a good solid citizen and we are with him all the way.

WASHINGTON, D.C. -- As President Carter met with officials in Egypt and Israel in his efforts to secure a peace treaty for the Middle East, details were being finalized at The American University for a three - week summer course that will take students to both Egypt and Israel to study the complex issues that concern those two Middle Eastern countries.

BEGIN CALLED AMERICAN JEWS MIGHTIEST

NEW YORK (WNS) -- Calling the American Jewish community the "mightiest" in diaspora history, Israeli Premier Menachem Begin urged American Jews not to underestimate their influence.

"When the time comes, do not hesitate to use your influence," he said in his last public address before returning to Israel to greet President Carter who was on his way to Cairo and Jerusalem in an effort to reach a peace treaty.

Begin's speech was enthusiastically received by some 2000 representatives of Jewish communities at the Sheraton Centre Hotel here as well as Jewish leaders in the Los Angeles area who heard the speech over a telephone hookup. The Premier urged American Jewry to "stand together" behind Israel "under any circumstances." He pledged that American Jews will always be "proud" of the Jewish State. "You know that Israel is ready to make sacrifices for peace, to take risks for peace," he declared. Begin also appealed to American Jews to come to live in Israel. "Start a real movement of aliya," he said. "Yes, yes, we need you."
