Dunes Hotel and Country Club senior consultant Charles J. Rich will receive the B'nai B'rith Anti - Defamation League (ADL) Award at a luncheon Thursday in the Dunes Sultan's Table Room. The Anti - Defamation League fights all forms of anti - semitism.

Since coming to Las Vegas in 1952, the renowned gaming industrialist has been responsible for many innovations. He was one of the original owners of the Sands Hotel which he helped found upon his arrival. He remained there until 1955 when he joined the Riviera which had opened only two months earlier.

The veteran gaming executive has three children, nine grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren. The children are George Duckworth, Dunes casino manager and Mrs. Rowena Murphy and Mrs. Lorayne Fisher.

Abba Eban and Shimon Peres in the course of his duties in both posts but also the amazing things he has to say about his many contacts with President Nixon and Henry Kissinger in periods of crisis for his struggling nation.

Throughout his Memoirs, published by Little, Brown & Company, Sabra Rabin hails Nixon as a genuinely true friend of Israel. In Chapter 9 captioned "Anatomy of a Cease-Fire", he delves deep into the history of the 'Rogers Initiative' of 19 June 1970 -- a hectic period for the Jewish State and its then Prime Minister Golda Meir who reluctantly accepted her Ambassador's advice to give Nixon a somewhat 'positive' diplomatic reply to that 'initiative' "whose professed aim" via Dr. Jarring "was to 'stop shooting and start talking'" with Egypt and Jordan.

But then something happened that shocked the West, especially the U.S. "The Soviet-Egyptian missile system had been moved toward a new line about 30 kilometers west of the canal and a number of Egyptian - manned missile batteries had been stationed even closer to the canal," Rabin recounts. "Furthermore, our attack on the missile system had been unsuccessful and several phantoms had been shot down in the process. This was a new and far more perilous situation," Rabin points out. "The next day, the President responded sharply by defining the latest Soviet move as an offensive action and sending the Russians a strongly-worded warning that the Middle East was 'a very dangerous region, like the Balkans before World War I. The two Great Powers would have to be very careful in their action to prevent a confrontation which neither wants...'"

Rabin then notes that "Israel was in a terrible bind. On the one hand," he said, "the political text of the Rogers initiative was not acceptable to her. At the same time, if the Egyptians rejected the cease-fire proposal, our planes were helpless against the missile system that had crept forward toward the canal. Three weeks went by while both sides remained mute on the subject of the Rogers initiative. Then, on July 22, Sisco notified me that Egypt had defied all expectations and had accepted it..."

Nixon was anxious about Israel's likely reaction to the Egyptian reply, Rabin notes and then proceeds to cite a letter which the President sent to Golda "asking her to consent to the initiative in order to prevent bloodshed." Some Israelis, he happily stresses, considered the letter "a latter - day Balfour Declaration." Rabin quotes it verbatim:

But then we will be recognized by Jordan and Syria will we? They sure as hell recognize the State of Israel as it is now. They tried many times to take these areas by military means and failed. What kind of a horse trade is that?

Then the Times says, "Maybe Connally is simply showing too much leadership...Connally has shown the leadership to call Arafat's murderers murderers."

What dribble. Connally represents Texas, Texas represents oil. Oil interests of Texas want no waves in the Middle East. By pampering to the wishes of the Arab countries, the Texas oil people will keep doubling and tripling their annual profits. By keeping a military presence in the buffer zones, the oil companies would be protecting their own interests of their annually bilking the American people. Sure Connally does not like Arafat, Arafat is a renegade Arab who could do much by violent means to disrupt the current flow of oil companies' profits with their Arab partners. So it is in Connally's best interests to blast Arafat but appease heads of Arab countries who do business with Exxon, Mobile, Texaco, etc.

Leadership, my goodness. This is a display of special interest garbage that some will actually believe is pro - American. Not us. We only hope Bob Brown and his Valley Times think and do their homework before agreeing with a presidential candidate who has a "solution" to the Middle East problem.

We knew another madman who had a solution -- a "final" solution to the Jewish problem. We wonder if he would have been spotted by the Times as a man of leadership. God help us.

"Our position on withdrawal is that the final borders must be agreed upon by both parties by means of negotiations under the auspices of Ambassador Jarring. Moreover, we will not press Israel to accept a solution to the refugee problem that will alter fundamentally the Jewish character of the State of Israel or jeopardize your security. We will adhere strictly and firmly to the fundamental principle that there must be a peace agreement in which each of the parties undertakes reciprocal obligations to the other. No Israeli soldier should be withdrawn from the present lines until a binding contractual peace agreement satisfactory to you has been achieved."

Anyone interested in the history of Israel's rebirth as a sovereign nation must not miss reading Yitzhak Rabin's chronicles of this rebirth. His Memoirs fill many gaps left open in the recent biographies of Herzog, Dayan, Eban and other distinguished Israeli leaders.

Teaching the Children

It is encouraging to learn that more and more high schools across the country are teaching about the Holocaust. This was demonstrated when more than 200 educators attended a recent two - day Second National Invitational Conference on Teaching about Genocide and the Nazi Holocaust in Secondary Schools. The conference, which was held in Arlington, Va., was sponsored by the Center for the Studies in the Holocaust of the Anti - Defamation League of B'nai B'rith and the National Council for Social Studies.

The increased attention given to the Holocaust is increased evidence of the interest in this tragic period not only by educators but also by students themselves. The recent NBC-TV series "Holocaust" of course has played a part in arousing this interest. One of the teachers at the conference described how he presented a filmstrip on what happened to one German Jewish family to his class of 75 in Fairfax County, Va., nearly all of them white Anglo - Saxon Protestants. The class knew very little about the Holocaust but then the response was "a tremendous amount of thought by students and on where they are now." The teacher plans to expand the section on the Holocaust from two to six weeks.

This development is very important. It means that the memory of the Holocaust will not die out with the survivors. It is thus important that teachers be trained to teach about the Holocaust, as the ADL is attempting to do, and that good educational material be developed.

But it must also be stressed, as it was at the Arlington conference, that the Holocaust be taught in the context of Jewish history so that a stereotyped picture of Jews as "eternal victims," not be left. The best way to do this is to also stress the accomplishments of the Jewish people as well as the creation of Israel by survivors committed to life, and to the establishment of a just society.

Nixon Was Israel's Pal

UNITED NATIONS (WUP) -- In his 344-page Memoirs, which reached the desk of your correspondent here on the eve of this historic month of November, Yitzhak Rabin speaks out bluntly about a number of American and Israeli leaders with whom he had to deal during the critical days of his incumbency as both Ambassador to the United States commencing in 1968 and as Prime Minister which post he assumed in 1974.

What stands out as most revealing in his fascinating and very well - written biography is not only what he discloses about the difficulties he encountered time and again with
