

Ipi Tombi

Captures the Imagination

Everyone at some time or another wants to visit places far away from their home and to see different cultures and life styles. The musical "Ipi-Tombi" playing at the Silverbird Hotel is just the theatrical vehicle capable of transporting audiences to South Africa where the powerful rhythmic beat of the drum creates an awesome effect.

"Ipi-Tombi" explores not only native dances but also colorful costumes and props imported from South Africa. Visually the show is well put together, however, it is the sheer raw energy exhibited by the twenty-three singers and dancers who never stop moving that enralls viewers. Keeping time with the pulsating beat is enough to tire anyone watching, yet viewers exit with energy to burn because their adrenalin was moved in the first place.

While the singing and dancing are exciting and complex in structure, the story line is simple with a universal theme. A young man leaves his tribal village and drifts to the big city in search of a better life. Realizing things are not always greener on the other side of the fence, he happily returns home to the pulsating rhythm of his African drums.

"Ipi-Tombi" has been a hit in Johannesburg and in
