Time was when Helldorado was the town's event of the year with citizens entering into all the fun with zest -- raising beards, getting tossed in the Elk's hoosegow, marching or riding the several parades down Fremont Street, whooping it up at the rodeos in Cashman Field and getting together for the annual barbeque. Las Saturday the parade moved a short distance down - Strip from the Sands and over Convention Center Drive to the Convention Center where the Black Velvet Tournament of Champions rodeo was in the final day, but supplanted this past Wednesday by the old familiar Helldorado Rodeo every night with a wrap on Sunday. That's about it. The so-called "Carnival & Midway" is nothing new to the parking lot front of the Convention Center -- this come - on pops up almost every other week. So -- what else is old?

PLAY OPENS TONIGHT

There'll be no fan-fair, no trumpets bellowing, no applause to bring down the house, when the curtains are raised May 16 for the Rainbow Company like there was last October when the Las Vegas children's performing ensemble opened "Oliver" but that won't make any difference to the small cast shining in the spot lights that night. They have something important to say, and with no musical distractions, no garish sets and with minimum props and lighting, the troupe will set the evening's mood. "One to Grow On," written by the Rainbow Company's Brian "Special Class" Karl celebrates the summer of a boy's 12th year. David Sankuer, Charles McCrea, Loy McCrea, Scott Davids, Ron Leach and Danny Marr complete the cast. The show, playing at the Charleston Heights Library Complex, weekends, evenings and matinees through June 1, is according to the director Jody Johnson, "one of children's theatre's brightest gifts." For this reason, special prices have been arranged so that more locals can see this performance. Tickets are available at the rates of $1.00 per child, $2.00 per adult,
