FIVE LEADING HOPEFULS VOW SECURITY, MONEY

WASHINGTON (WNS) -- Five Presidential candidates or their representatives appeared before the 21st annual policy conference of the American Israel Public Affairs Committee and pledged their support for Israel's security.

"We all love Israel and AIPAC," said Ray Cline, a former State Department and CIA official, who represented George Bush.

Also appearing were Independent John Anderson (R. Ill.); Vice President Walter Mondale for President Carter; Sen. Edward Kennedy (D, Mass.) and William Casey for Ronald Reagan.

Mondale stressed that "the one crucial difference" between Carter and the other candidates is "not on promises but in offering performance." He said Carter should be "judged on the record" which Mondale said was an "unprecedented performance." He noted that the U.S. has provided Israel with $22 billion during the 32 years, half of which was allocated by the Carter Administration.

"Those who criticize" Carter, Egyptian President Anwar Sadat and Israeli Premier Menachem Begin should "Turn their criticism

If in heaven we don't meet, I hope you can stand the heat.

It seems like just a few days ago we hot-shot high school seniors passed around our year books to write and receive "brilliant" messages as those above. We especially glorified the gladiators of the football and basketball wars.

"Dear Tommy, May your clutch shooting in bringing our team to a third consecutive state championship take you straight to the pros."
