

SUMMIT MEETING WILL TAKE PLACE IN DEC.

JERUSALEM (WNS) -- Premier Menachem Begin made it clear that Israel regards the resumption of the autonomy negotiations with Egypt as a precondition for a summit meeting between himself, President Anwar Sadat of Egypt and President Carter. According to Begin, the summit will probably take place in December. The Premier told the Cabinet that Israel agreed to a summit meeting only after it was assured in the communique issued jointly by Sadat and Begin and announced in Alexandria by U.S. special envoy Sol Linowitz that the autonomy talks would be resumed "at a mutually agreed date."

Linowitz, who returned from a week's visit to Israel and Egypt where he met with top officials in an effort to get the stalled autonomy talks moving again, told a press conference in Washington that the U.S. presented Israel and Egypt with its own comprehensive proposals when the autonomy talks begin. He declined to provide details of the U.S. plan but said it covered all outstanding differences between Egypt and Israel, except the issue of Jerusalem. The main areas, Linowitz said, dealt with water rights, land title, settlements and security in the autonomous area. He implied that Jerusalem would be discussed at the summit meeting.

The consensus in the Cabinet was that Egypt has softened its stand on the autonomy talks and wants to clear the atmosphere that has clouded the relations between the countries since the autonomy talks were suspended by Egypt last May. One indication of the new Egyptian mood was evident in an article published September 7 by the Egyptian journalist Anis Mansour, a close associate of Sadat, in the weekly magazine, October.
