200,000 PERSONS MARCH TO DENOUNCE RACISM

PARIS (WNS) -- West European Jewish communities were still tense a week after a powerful bomb exploded outside a Reform synagogue in Paris killing four persons and injuring 32. The French Jewish community, which with 700,000 members is the largest in Western Europe, continued to react with rage and grief, which was shared by tens of thousands of non-Jewish French citizens.

Demonstrations which included people from all walks of life and from all political parties continued in Paris. Criticism was mainly aimed at the French government of President Valery Giscard d'Estaing and Premier Raymond Barre which was accused of laxity in dealing with the recent upsurge of neo-Nazi anti-Semitic activity all over France and the seeming impotence of the French police. Demands were made for the resignation of Interior Minister Christian Bonnet.

Many in France were shocked to learn that about one-fifth of the French police force are members of the out-lawed neo-Nazi Federation. (Continued on Page 18)

Jewish Voters' Interests

(EDITOR'S NOTE: RABBI ARTHUR HERTZBERG POINTS OUT THE PARADOX OF THE JEWISH VOTER IN THIS PRESIDENTIAL ELECTION AS WELL AS PAST ONES. IN THIS RECENT ARTICLE IN THE NEW YORK TIMES, HERTZBERG SHOWS HOW JEWS DO NOT NECESSARILY VOTE FOR THE MAN MOST LIKELY TO HELP ISRAEL, BUT FOR THE CANDIDATE THAT WILL MOST LIKELY BRING PEACE AND TRANQUILLITY TO THE WORLD. HERTZBERG IS IMMEDIATE PAST PRESIDENT OF THE AMERICAN JEWISH CONGRESS.)

ENGLEWOOD, N.J. -- Like all Americans, I want a President who will promote domestic tranquillity and make us strong but not warlike. The pollsters, however, type me as belonging to the "Jewish vote" and presume that my views are determined by my passion for Israel. Here they are finding something strange. Ronald Reagan is the most ardent pro-Israel "hard-liner" of the candidates and yet he has now, at maximum, one-quarter of the Jewish vote, with the rest divided between President Carter and John B. Anderson, and some people are still making up their minds.

The issue of Israel is thus a political paradox. It stirs the Jewish community in its entirety, and yet when a supposedly clear voice is available between a maximalist Mr. Reagan and a moderate Mr. Carter, there is no stampede toward the Republican. Why?

Jews presume as beyond doubt that both major parties are for the existence of a secure, viable Israel. They know that disaster will not come to Israel -- whoever is elected. Campaign promises about Israel are largely disbelieved, no matter who makes them, because Jews know that, whoever is elected, Israel's maximum demands will not be realized. Administration after Administration, Republican or Democrat, have taken turns in refusing to confront the Arab world as a whole on such issues as the ultimate control of the West Bank, the Palestinians, and the nature of the final settlement even in an undivided Jerusalem. Some actions that have flowed from this posi-
