The annual UNLV Bernice Schiffman Scholarship Foundation luncheon and fashion show is set for noon Tuesday, April 14th at Caesars Palace.

According to Evelyn Feinberg, this year's program promises to be the most exciting in the eleven year history of the organization. "We are especially honored because Mr. Tom Stangl, Vice President and General Manager of the Neiman Marcus has agreed to present their first fashion show since opening their Las Vegas store, for our benefit."

This year's scholarship recipients are

UNLV students Susan Dibella, a senior majoring in communication studies, Michele Tratos, a senior biology MA Major, Brian Carnes a sophomore and Michael Jones, a freshman enrolled in a course of general studies.

The Schiffman non-sectarian foundation was established in 1970 as a way of memorializing the long-time Las Vegas resident who 'dedicated herself to the service of others.'

Donations for the luncheon are $15.00 per person, with all funds going toward the scholarships for UNLV students.

During the eleven year history of the foundation, thirty-six scholarships have been granted through the Bernice Schiffman UNLV Foundation.

"Let All Who Are Hungry Come And Eat ... And Celebrate The Passover."

The traditions of Passover are not only ancient but beautiful. Just as important, they are as relevant today as they were centuries ago. And inviting all those who are hungry to come and eat has become a hallmark of the Jewish way of life.

For almost a century, we have been helping families honor Passover with an array of delicious products specially prepared for this festive occasion. And we like to feel that, in some way, we add to the joyousness of the holiday.

Happy Passover!
