

REFUSENIKS GET EXIT VISAS

NEW YORK (WNS) -- Grigory Goman, a doctor of radio-physical engineering, his wife Larissa, and their five-year-old daughter have received permission to emigrate to Israel after having waited for almost nine years for an exit visa, it was announced here. Goman, 45, who has not been able to work in his field since 1972, was subjected to constant police harassment since he first applied for the visa in 1972. Meanwhile, the wife of Prisoner of Conscience Anatoly Shcharansky has reported that Anatoly is going blind and that his weight is down to 91 pounds. Avital Shcharansky told reporters in England during a visit there that "the situation is now so grave that I feel he is going to die." Avital said Anatoly is only being given bread and soup in the Soviet labor camp where he is serving a 15-year term.

In another development, Ida Nudel reported that the hut in the village in which she lives in the remote Siberian village of Krivesheino, to which she was exiled in 1978, was searched by Soviet authorities after fellow activists visited her. One of the visitors, Dr. Isai Goldstein, was detained and interrogated and the tape of his conversation with Nudel was confiscated.
